Seeking Public Input, PRS Holds Forum On 25 Valley Road

The Princeton Regional School District Board of Education will host a public discussion on the future of its Valley Road building on Wednesday, October 18, at 7 p.m. in the John Witherspoon Middle School cafeteria.

The public is invited to view a presentation by KSS Architects, LLP, the Princeton firm appointed in June by the district to analyze current and potential uses for the building.

Located on Witherspoon Street, KSS Architects designed the Princeton Township Municipal Building across Witherspoon Street from 25 Valley Road.

At the public forum, KSS manger for the Valley Road project Merillee Meacock will describe the company's initial findings — with respect to the building's prominent position between the important areas of Nassau Street and the University, and the Princeton Shopping Center — for the first 15 to 20 minutes before opening the discussion with the audience.

"This property could be developed in a way that would benefit the community as a whole," said Ms. Meacock. "We are hoping to gather feedback and ideas from the community before moving on to the next stage, which will be to see what is feasible within given building and zoning codes. We want to gather information from all viewpoints."

Neighbors and local business owners are encouraged to attend. In addition to use by the school district, proposals considering the property's potential use for sports, shops, or other needs in relation to the districts demographics would be welcome, as would ideas that would provide revenue for Princeton schools to help offset the tax impact of growing but restricted school budgets.

According to Ms. Meacock, one of the project's goals is to salvage as much of the existing building as possible. "We are looking at which pieces are viable and what needs to be taken down. While the front of the building is quite pretty, it has cracking and roof problems."

The district intends to maintain its sole ownership of the Valley Road property, which earlier in the year was described as being underused and in need of repair.

Currently, the building houses offices of the Superintendent of Schools, as well as offices for Curriculum and Instruction,

Agency Weighs In On Student Arrests

Following an investigation sparked by the September 20 arrests of four Princeton High School students, a civil rights subcommittee of the Princeton Human Services Commission has ruled that Princeton Borough Police acted within the realm of protocol, but that some changes to standard procedure could be made.

The Commission has reached out to both the Princeton Regional Schools and the Princeton Borough Police Department, pointing to possible improvements in the way student-related arrests are handled that would preclude situations like the one that escalated into a racially-charged standoff between the police department and the families of four minors charged with juvenile delinquency and complicity in the September 8 beatings of three Hispanic men.

After police had arrested three men for direct involvement in the beatings, the department had contacted the families of the minors asking them to bring their children to headquarters for questioning. When the families balked, Borough Police arrived at Princeton High School the morning of September 20, and, according to department accounts, did not question the minors, two 14- and two 15-year-olds, all male, until their parents had arrived at the station.

Afraid that their children could be exposed to gang-related retribution, the parents felt that the department had crossed the line. At the time, Police Chief Anthony Federico said the department used standard procedure, bringing in plainclothes officers to execute the arrests, and that the students were not handcuffed. "We asked the parents to bring them up to the police station so we would not have to do what we did, but they refused to do so," Chief Federico said at the time. On department assignment this week, Chief Federico was unavailable for comment.

There are some questions as to whether uniformed officers were on the scene as well, but, according to Township Committeeman Lance Liverman, who is also the Township's liaison to the Human Services Commission, the investigation found that while the police did not deviate from

Approved Senior Housing Complex Put Off as Hovnanian Pulls Out

In a decisive setback in a longstanding campaign to build market rate senior housing in Princeton Township, developer giant K. Hovnanian Homes has decided to pull out of a project to construct an already approved, 62-and-up, 140-unit housing complex slated to be built on Bunn Drive, just south of Hilltop Park.

The move coincides with recent reports that Hovnanian Enterprises, combating a rising stock of unsold homes, is letting go executive staff and other personnel. In light of these uphill battles, there had been speculation in recent weeks that the developer would balk at bringing its senior living Four Seasons brand to the 20.9-acre expanse in the Township.

While environmental concerns had complicated the entire planning process for the project, which received final Planning Board approval in October of last year, the developer instead cited a number of market forces, including the sales pace slowdown of new and resale houses, lower-than-expected sales prices, and rising construction costs amid falling revenue, and the basic land price to acquire standard procedure already in place, the incident merits a change in protocol.

"The policy the school had in place was followed, but is that the way we want to conduct business in the future when it comes to young people at Princeton High School?" Mr. Liverman said. "It's not the procedure I would have used."

Mr. Liverman said that he would work with the school district to ensure that only plainclothes officers would remove students from school during school hours, and that a district representative accompanies the student with the police to the station. "I think that would alleviate a lot of the concerns of the parents. It's not always about what you do, but how you do it."

While Human Service Commissioners have yet to meet face-to-face with the Borough Police or school district representation, there is likely to be a formal meeting in the coming weeks.

Princeton University announced Monday that the school will compete to retain management of the Princeton Plasma Physics Laboratory (PPPL) after its five-year contract expired on September 30. University officials have indicated that they would like to see the school continue its 55-year administrative oversight for PPPL, a leader in magnetic fusion energy research. "We are committed to making the strongest possible case for continuing to manage PPPL," said University President Shirley Tilghman. The University is expected to submit a proposal to the U.S. Department of Energy, the agency that funds PPPL. "We are proud of the cutting-edge science and engineering the laboratory has accomplished, and we have great confidence that it will continue to make breakthrough discoveries in the years ahead." PPPL is one of 10 national science laboratories funded by the Department of Energy's Office of Science. The University is now operating under a one-year extension through September 30, 2007, with one-month extension options for up to a year after that.

Princeton Senior Resource Center was awarded the 2006 Community Spirit Award in recognition of its efforts to exemplify the mission of the Commission, which includes the enhancement of the quality of life of youth, seniors, and the economically disadvantaged. The award, presented at the Princeton Human Services Commission breakfast last Thursday at the Nassau Club, is granted annually to a group or individual in recognition of their work in these areas. Specifically, PSRC was honored for its support of adults age "55 to 105" as they encounter life transitions: retirement, moving, loss of family members and friends, and health problems.

The Healthcare Policy Committee of The Princeton Community Democratic Organization (PCDO) will sponsor a public forum this Sunday, October 15, at 7:30 p.m. at the Suzanne Patterson Senior Center, located behind Princeton Borough Hall. The event marks the launch of a campaign spearheaded by the committee to achieve healthcare reform in New Jersey. Scheduled to appear are Steven M. Goldman, commissioner of the New Jersey Department of Banking and Insurance, as well as Dr. Mark Schlesinger, a professor of Public Health at Yale, and Joel C. Cantor, professor of Public Policy at the Edward J. Bloustein School at Rutgers. For more information, visit www.princetondems.org.

HomeFront is seeking formal evening attire, namely tuxedos and evening dresses (all sizes, but especially sizes 14-24), for its clients to wear at a celebration of achievement scheduled to take place on November 10. Over 100 formerly homeless parents, most of them mothers, will celebrate their successful return to independence after months of learning the skills and acquiring the tools enabling them to provide their children with a safe, secure and permanent home. The event will include a presentation by Mercer County Assemblywoman Bonnie Watson Coleman. Dresses may be dropped off at HomeFront at 1880 Princeton Avenue in Lawrenceville.

The Princeton Public Library will hold its next monthly Board of Trustees meeting next Tuesday, October 17, at 5:30 p.m. in the conference room on the second floor of the library. The meeting is open to the public.

HiTOPS Celebrates 20 Years As the Place for Teen Health

HiTOPS (Health-Interested Teens' Own Program on Sexuality), the teen health center on Wiggins Street, will celebrate two decades of providing clinical and health care services to young adults when it opens its doors to the community next Wednesday, October 18, from 3 to 7 p.m.

"The occasion is a chance to thank our existing supporters and meet new friends in the community," said Lori Heninger, executive director of the facility that serves more than 10,000 young adults each year.

The event also provides an opportunity to view the new health care center. Located to the rear of the main building on Wiggins Street, the new facility is youth-friendly by design.

"We try to make sure that contemporary music is playing and teen interest magazines are available," said Ms. Heninger. "Kids feel comfortable coming here."

The most common question posed by adolescent youth from New Jersey to Chad is: "Am I normal?" or "Is it normal to feel this way?"

"Teenagers around the globe ask variants of this question," said Ms. Heninger, who worked with refugee youth during time spent directing the Children and Adolescents Program for the Women's Commission for Refugee Women and Children.

"When I first came to HiTOPS," said Ms. Heninger, "the question I kept returning to was: where do adolescents and young adults go for health care in our society?"

"HiTOPS is the only such resource for adolescent health in the entire state of New Jersey, so where do they go? The answer is, they go to pediatricians. Our society sees adolescence, if it is thought of at all, as a problem period, as something to be endured on the way from childhood to adulthood."

Adolescence is not only a period of change for young adults, it's often a period when parents are anxious about changes in their children's behavior.

According to Ms. Heninger, "It's okay to be worried but it's not okay to do nothing about those worries. Society mustn't ignore adolescents. Let's figure out what they need and approach this period of development from a more positive angle — it's an exciting time with a lot of ambiguity associated with it. The question is how do we help them negotiate that ambiguity."

Board member Arthur J. Ferrara agrees: "My father's generation described the period of adolescence as an 'awkward age.' In contrast, HiTops recognizes this very important developmental period as one in which there's an enormous need for information — about self, stress, nutrition, and the list goes on."

"At HiTOPS we believe in informing kids so that they can begin to make good decisions about their own lives," said Ms. Heninger. "We honor the fact that they can make good decisions."

The center's services include smoking cessation counseling and treatment, gynecological exams, HIV testing and counseling, sexually transmitted infection testing and treatment, contraception and emergency contraception, pregnancy testing and options counseling, as well as general and sports physicals. Clinical services are provided by certified nurse practitioners.

"We are not just about reproductive health," said Ms. Heninger, "but about the whole person. We are very proud of the adolescent clients who come here, because they are taking responsibility for their own health care and learning to advocate for themselves."

HiTOPS serves people from the age of 12 to 27 — adolescents as defined by the National College of Pediatrics.

All its services are confidential and service fees are charged on a sliding scale. No one in need turned away.

"We operate on a basis of trust and our goal is to have families that are united and healthy," said Ms. Heninger. "We have a great deal of support from the Princeton community."

Funding for HiTOPS comes from multiple sources, individual contributions from members of the community, private foundations, corporations and state government.

Educational Outreach

Besides being a health care center, HiTOPS is also an educational facility. According to Elizabeth Casparian, director of educational programs, HiTOPS outreach programs have become models across the state of New Jersey.

"Our courses meet the NJ Core Curriculum standards in health," she said, "and peer education groups, in which 20 high school students introduce HiTOPS to their peers, have become very influential."

Ms. Casparian and a staff of seven provide educational programs to teens and parents throughout New Jersey. The group's mission is to inform adolescents so that they will be better able to avoid the adverse consequences of premature sexual behavior, including unwanted pregnancy and sexually transmitted infections.

For Parents

"Our expertise is in working with youth, but parents are very important in what we do," said Ms. Casparian, who often hears from parents concerned that their own values are not being taught to their adolescent children.

A longtime Princeton resident, Ms. Casparian has given hundreds of lectures, workshops and presentations on all aspects of sexual health, parenting, and adolescent development to audiences nationwide.

She believes that parents actually have more power and influence than they might think. "We try to offer parents ways to build their adolescents' self-esteem. We are all about kids making better and healthier choices regarding sex and drinking, among other behaviors.

For parents, HiTOPS offers workshops one night every month to promote good communication skills within the family and to instill positive values.

On Wednesday, October 25, from 7 to 9 p.m., Ms. Casparian will present a talk at the center titled: "Risk-Proof Your Kids." In November, the subject will be: "Food, Fitness, and Fun — Finding a Healthy Balance for Your Family." Future talks cover topics including sexual orientation, video games, the role of fathers in raising healthy teens, dealing with teen stress, and body image in teenage girls.

Since HiTOPS was founded in 1987 by registered nurse Bonnie Parker, the breadth and depth of its services has grown. Mr. Ferrara, chair of the 20th anniversary celebrations, said: "HiTOPS makes for a stronger, healthier, better community for all of us. We want the entire Princeton community to come and see what is done here and to celebrate with us."

"There are very few facilities like this in the nation and the only one in New Jersey is right here in Princeton," said Ms. Heninger. That's something to celebrate.

HiTOPS will celebrate 20 years of service from 3 to 7 p.m. on Wednesday, October 18, at 21 Wiggins Street, one block from the Princeton Public Library on Witherspoon Street. For more information, call (609) 683-5155. To register for a parent program (for which a donation of $12 is suggested), call (609) 683-5155, ext. 234, or e-mail ecasparian@HiTOPS.org.

New Supervisor of Guidance Joins Snyder's PHS Team

The Princeton Regional Schools District has announced the appointment of Marleen O'Connor as supervisor of guidance at Princeton High School (PHS). Ms. O'Connor took up her new post on October 1.

Settling in to her office at the high school last week, Ms. O'Connor said that her first task is to assess the needs of the school. "The challenge will be to do the best we can to address those needs with the programs that are already in place as well as to develop existing programs further," she said.

"We are very excited to have Ms. O'Connor here with us," said PHS Principal Gary Snyder. "Marleen will be a great addition to our team, and so much of what we do here is a team effort."

Ms. O'Connor comes to PHS from a job as assistant principal at Middletown High School North in Monmouth County, a position she has held since 2004. Before that, she taught in the Jersey City public school system for almost three decades, most recently as Coordinator of Guidance in the Henry Snyder High School, an inner-city school with a large transient population.

Marleen O'Connor

In addition to serving as coordinator of the citywide Jersey City Summer Schools program, Ms. O'Connor's experience in the Jersey City School District includes teaching grades 5 through 8 from 1977 to 1980, teaching gifted and talented students in grades 6 though 8 from 1980 to 1992, and responsibilities as a guidance counselor at the elementary, middle school, and high school levels.

A graduate of the Academy of Saint Aloysius High School in Jersey City, Ms. O'Connor has a BS in Education and an MA in Guidance and Rehabilitation Counseling from Saint John's University, New York, and an MA in Administration and Supervision from New Jersey City University.

Ms. O'Connor said that three main factors influenced her decision to come to Princeton High School: the community of Princeton, the role of the Princeton schools within that community, and the opportunity to join a team led by Mr. Snyder.

"As an educator, a great relationship between the school and the community is something you try to build," said Ms. O'Connor. "Here in Princeton — which is a phenomenal community — that relationship is already in place. I am very pleased to be working with Mr. Snyder and his team and look forward to building for the future."

A resident of Hazlet, New Jersey, where she is vice-president of the board of education, Ms. O'Conner and her husband, Wayne, a captain in the Jersey City Fire Department, have two daughters. Erin, 22, graduated this year from Rutgers with a double major in psychology and communications. Courtney, 13, is an 8th grader at Hazlet Middle School, where she is a cheerleader, a cross-country track athlete, and also competes in English hunter-style horse back riding.

"After spending 19 years driving to Jersey City each day, the drive to Princeton is a pleasure, passing through fields of corn, and the occasional horse farm," commented Ms. O'Connor.

Rescue Report

Shortly after midnight on Sunday morning, the Princeton First Aid & Rescue Squad began the first of eight calls to Princeton University In slightly more than two hours. Six of the calls were alcohol related, and three that came almost simultaneously were dispatched at McCosh Infirmary. One of the eight patients was treated for facial injuries suffered in an assault and was transported to the hospital for evaluation. Later that day the same patient was found unconscious in his dorm room. The Squad transported him to the trauma center at Capital Health System's Fuld Campus.

On Monday, October 2, the Squad responded to the towpath for a female injured in a bicycle-pedestrian collision. The patient was reported to have briefly lost consciousness as a result of the impact and suffered pain in her leg. The crew secured her to a spinal immobilization device and moved her off the towpath in the Squad's utility vehicle, which is capable of off-road transportation. Once back on the road, she was transferred to the waiting ambulance and taken to the hospital.

On Wednesday October 4, the Squad responded for a male bicyclist who struck a car. The impact caused the rider, who was not wearing a helmet, to fall and land on his shoulder and head. The crew secured him to a spinal immobilization device and transported him to the hospital for evaluation.
The Princeton First Aid & Rescue Squad is a non-profit, volunteer-run emergency services organization. For more information on membership and donation opportunities, visit www.pfars.org or call 924-3338.

Fire Wire

The all-volunteer Princeton Fire Department responded to a variety of calls this past week, including false alarms for faulty smoke or carbon monoxide detectors at homes and businesses on Chambers Street, Lawrence Drive, Mercer Street, North Harrison Street, Pheasant Hill Road, Prospect Street, Shirley Court, Washington Road, and Witherspoon Street.

On Sunday, crews investigated an odor of smoke in an Armour Road residence and discovered the residents had started a fire in the fireplace without opening the fireplace flu. They ventilated the residence.

The Princeton Fire Department, one of the oldest in the country, was founded in 1788. It is made up of three companies — Princeton Hook and Ladder, Princeton Engine Co. No. 1 and Mercer Engine Co. No. 3. The department is always looking for more members. If interested, call (609) 540-9343 or (609) 731-1313.

TOWN TALK©

A forum for Princeton residents to express opinions about local and national issues.

Question of the Week:

"What is your opinion about the Medical Clinic Task Force determining there is no need for an out patient clinic to remain in town after the hospital relocates?"

"I think that it is a wise decision because if you had a clinic on Witherspoon Street, you would have two separate medical places. It would be better to have one location where you could consolidate all of the services under one umbrella. Even if there were a clinic here, you likely would have to go to the hospital anyway to get things done that were not available at a clinic. It is also better financially for the hospital." — Roland Alexander, Leigh Avenue

"It would depend upon if there are other places in town for people to get outpatient care conveniently. Based on the lack of other care facilities, I think that it is a bad idea to not have a clinic here." — Christi Owen, Emmons Drive

"For me, I could readily get to the new hospital, but for many, that is not so easy so there should probably be a clinic in town." — Steve Konnis, Hutchinson Drive

"People in town will be able to use the new facility so it is OK to not have a clinic in town. People have to get off these crowded little streets with all the people around." — Perry Leavell, Hodge Road

"I think that it is a bad idea to not have a clinic in town. There is a large community that surrounds this hospital that is going to have a large deficit when the facility leaves." — Stuart Lieberman, Western Way

Borough Accepts Task Force Findings That Clinic Should Move With Hospital

After a task force found that maintaining a free-standing medical clinic on Witherspoon Street once the University Medical Center at Princeton relocates to Plainsboro would be less than cost-effective and could create a dichotomous, "two-tiered" medical system, Borough Council last week unanimously passed a resolution supporting those findings, effectively ending a months-long debate.

Composed of medical experts, municipal officials, and residents, the Medical Center Task Force was commissioned to conduct a study on the feasibility of maintaining a second, free-standing medical clinic on Witherspoon Street in addition to the clinic that will exist at the hospital's new facility. In finding that two clinics might lead to inequities in health care, the task force, as expected, unanimously voted in favor of maintaining one clinic at the hospital's future site.

In its findings, the task force determined that the number of patients using the current clinic without access to a car or bus was "miniscule," according to Claire Jacobus, who chaired the task force.

However, the hospital has agreed to transport to its future facility "anybody who cannot access that clinic in any way," she said, adding that the clinic is specifically geared for patients who cannot afford medical care.

Ms. Jacobus said the task force preferred for the clinic to remain in a hospital setting because of the number of medical services a hospital can provide. She also said, citing a testimonial by Margaret Lancefield, a physician and medical director of the Princeton charity care clinic, that patients who fall into the "working poor" category would likely have to take more than one day off from work if it was found that, during a clinic visit, they needed medical attention available at the hospital.

Pam Hersh, vice president for government and community affairs for the hospital's parent, Princeton HealthCare System, cited a proviso in the hospital's certificate of need indicating that transportation would be provided for those who had no access to a new facility. Ms. Hersh mentioned an on-demand jitney service, as well as establishing a health care information center in the vicinity of the current hospital location that would help potential patients schedule appointments, answer questions, and find transportation.

Ms. Hersh also pointed to the possibility of working with New Jersey Transit to realign some of its bus routes to accommodate the hospital's new location.

"We will get anyone who currently walks to the hospital to the new clinic," she said.

Borough Mayor Mildred Trotman, pointing to an August meeting with state Department of Transportation Commissioner Kris Kolluri, said that area municipalities should continue working with the state to provide a left turn lane at Harrison Street leading onto Route 1. At that meeting, Mr. Kolluri was hesitant to fully endorse or reject any proposal, namely because of the anticipated Penns Neck Bypass. That project's funding, however, is, by most accounts, far from complete, and most estimates point to 2015 for construction.

While Council President Peggy Karcher said that the Borough is acting "reactively" to hospital relocation in general, she added that "we couldn't do better than create the very thing the task force has provided for us."

Princeton Composer Provides Inaugural Overture for New Center

A new work by Princeton composer, Ira J. Mowitz, will be featured in the by-invitation-only Gala Concert to be held this Saturday evening in the new auditorium at Princeton High School (PHS).

The concert, from 7 to 9 p.m., will be a celebratory thank-you to all those who have helped to fund the Princeton Regional School District's state-of the art performing arts center — of which the auditorium is the centerpiece — and those who donated through the Princeton Education Foundation's Take a Seat campaign. It culminates a day of special activities throughout the school.

Mr. Mowitz's festive 5-minute overture will be performed by all the musicians in the 45-member high school orchestra, under the baton of Robert Loughran. Student musicians will play simultaneously with a computer-generated soundtrack, created by Mr. Mowitz to showcase the auditorium's quarter-million dollar custom-designed sound system.

"Not only is this an opportunity for young musicians to work with a professional composer, it is equally rewarding for the professional composer," said Mr. Mowitz, who has written extensively for instruments in combination with computers.

A former string bass player and pianist, Mr. Mowitz enjoys working with children. He has included school and playground sounds in much of his recent work, as well as his sons' voices. Aaron, a junior at PHS, is a violinist and violist. Zachary, a 5th grader at the Charter School, is a cellist. Both perform with Temple University's Program for Gifted Young Musicians in Philadelphia and study with teachers from the Philadelphia Orchestra.

While the composer is reluctant to divulge too many details about Saturday night's piece, he has said that the voice of someone prominent at PHS features in the new composition, which remains as yet, untitled.

"I've decided to let the conductor title the piece," said Mr. Mowitz, who described the logistics and simple mechanics of making the recorded part as mind-boggling.

"I won't go into the details of generating sound with computer programs but suffice it to say there is no keyboard and no music staves; the digital music I used was made very painstakingly with much programming, and digital mixing. For the cognescenti it's all done in software."

Based on an extant piece of his own computer music, Mr. Mowitz likened the new work to a movie soundtrack in which you typically find orchestral music mixed with the dialogue track, ambient noises, and whatever effects the action calls for. "One can think of my music as a movie soundtrack sans film," he said.

Mr. Mowitz's music has been featured on NPR's All Things Considered, and has been performed by the Brooklyn Philharmonic and choreographed by the National Dance Company of Spain.

Though widely known for his work with computers and music, in particular his critically acclaimed CD A la Memoire d'un Ami, Mr. Mowitz is an instrumental composer by training.

A graduate of Trinity College, Hartt College, and Princeton University, he has taught and lectured before a wide range of audiences from 6-year-old Suzuki violinists to international scholars in Austria and Romania.

He also studied at the Salzburg Mozarteum, the Wiener Hochschule für Musik, and Stanford, and has received grants and commissions from the Guggenheim, Rockefeller, NEA, Fulbright, Meet-the-Composer, and Siday foundations, among others.

Impressed by the auditorium's sound system, Mr. Mowitz expects a very professional performance for Saturday's night's gala.

"I've been told that the architect engaged a professional sound and light company that has worked for Lincoln Center and on Broadway to come in and run the new setup for my and the other productions."

"Typically I use two computers in the last composition phase but I often use several in preparing the material."

The PHS orchestra has been working on Mr. Mowitz's composition for the last two weeks or so, following an initial introduction to the first minute-and-a-half of the piece in June when they met with the composer and discussed the work.

The meeting had an impact on the composer as well as the high school orchestra. Although he has been working with young musicians for the past several years, it was only after meeting with the high school orchestra last June that he realized that custom fitting music for talented young musical ensembles in school settings was something that he would like to do more of in the future.

Over the summer, the composer began working on a new venture, a "Build-a-Piece," program that will take him into schools to work with music directors and student musicians to create music that is tailored to their ensemble's instrumentation and playing level.

In addition to Saturday night's gala performance, there will be an open dress rehearsal Friday morning at 10 a.m. for orchestra parents. The performance will also be broadcast live on Channel 30.

"I hope the students and community enjoy the work I've created for them, and benefit from the interaction with a working professional composer," he said.

Parent Volunteers Skills To Design New Logo

Ira Grunther is thrilled that his son will enter Princeton High School in time to benefit from the renovation of the old and construction of the new.

The Princeton parent is especially looking forward to seeing the auditorium in the performing arts center this Saturday.

"My son Andrew is now an 8th grader at JWMS, and my son acts and sings, so I imagine I'll be seeing him there often," he said.

As a freelance medical illustrator and art director, Mr. Grunther, offered his skills to the Princeton Education Foundation (PEF) after attending a PTO meeting this spring, where he heard about the new performing arts center from the Foundation's Holly Holcombe.

Conversations with Ms. Holcombe and Board of Education member Charlotte Blalek, about the need for a symbol of some sort for the performing arts center, led to the creation of a logo that is a playful conjoining of the center's three initials, PAC, and a trio of functions in theater, dance, and music.

"Once I decided to use the initials as the foundation for the design, it didn't take long to develop the logo," said Mr. Grunther, who first considered and then rejected the idea of basing the design on a sketch of the new building's architecture.

As a freelance medical illustrator, whose clientele consists of large pharmaceutical companies and smaller biotech companies, healthcare advertising agencies, animation studios, and medical publishers, most of the logo design work that Mr. Grunther does through his business, Images in Medicine, usually lends itself to initials or acronyms.

Mr. Grunther expects that the new space at PHS will be referred to by an acronym.

"I like the idea of referring to it casually as P-pac. The Princeton Performing Arts Center is a real mouthful. Think of Lincoln Financial Field versus The Link in Philadelphia, for example."

He hopes that his PPAC logo will be used on stationery and brochures, as well as, perhaps on signage, and possibly on T shirts, key chains, and the like.

It was not the first time he had used his talents for a Princeton school. When Andrew was attending Community Park, Mr. Grunther designed a logo, various posters, and t-shirts for the school to raise money for the PTO.

"I was so happy with my son's first years at CP, that I wanted to show my appreciation to the school in some way."

In addition to the PPAC logo, Mr. Grunther executed the design for the Princeton Regional Schools bumper stick with its playful tiger pawprints. The bumper stickers will be on sale in the new school store this Saturday.

"I especially enjoy creating these projects for the schools as it allows me to try the kinds of things I never get to do for my pharmaceutical clients," he said.

PLAYFUL BY DESIGN: This design for a logo for the new performing arts center at Princeton High School was created by Ira Grunther, the proud parent of an 8th grader at John Witherspoon Middle School, who looks forward to seeing his son perform in the new space when he goes up to the high school next year. The logo plays on the center's three initials, PAC, and three functions in theater, dance, and music.

A Big Thank You to Princeton When PHS Unveils New Facilities

After five long years of construction and renovation work, the Princeton Regional School District will officially open its new facilities at Princeton High School (PHS) and John Witherspoon Middle School (JWMS) this Saturday, October 14.

"We hope as many people as possible will join us for the Saturday celebrations," said Judy Wilson, superintendent of Princeton Regional Schools. " This is our way of saying 'Thank You Princeton'."

The school district has organized the event to showcase the new facilities, including science labs with a rooftop greenhouse for the study of horticulture and the environment, classrooms, performing arts center, and athletic facilities.

"We are delighted with the facilities," said Ms. Wilson. "Students and staff will certainly benefit from the new resources available to them and we are very grateful to the community for its great support of the Princeton Regional Schools."

Festivities will kick off at 12:30 p.m. with a short ceremony outside the new PHS auditorium at which Joe Reardon of the Princeton Symphony will perform a trumpet fanfare.

The event includes free concerts, demonstrations, and exhibits by the students and staff; tours of the new buildings; and a festive street fair, involving student groups as well as many of the district's community partners.

The festivities will be arranged in four themed areas: literacy, arts, public service, and healthy kids, featuring the elementary schools' edible gardens, The Bent Spoon and Whole Earth Center.

Besides PRS district staff, students, parents, volunteers, groups supporting the event include Ernest Bock & Sons, Inc., Parker McCay, McCaffrey's Market, Princeton University's Office for Community and Regional Affairs, and Coldwell Banker. Over 30 community organizations representing the arts, history, government, education, health, sports, and business, are expected to participate with stalls running the length of Walnut Lane.

Guided by high school students, visitors will be able to tour the high school's new 770-seat auditorium, with its state-of-the-art sound system and orchestra pit.

Named in honor of two former PRS bandmasters, William Trego and Anthony Biancosino, the auditorium is the centerpiece of the new performing arts center, which also includes choir, orchestra, and band rooms, as well as improved instrument storage.

Fifth grade choirs will perform in the auditorium from 1 to 1:30 p.m., followed by students from JWMS and Cranbury from 2 to 3 p.m., and then by musical theater and operatic excepts by the Westminster Choir College.

"Our students and staff are busy preparing for the Saturday Celebrations," said Linda Shaw, supervisor for visual and performing arts. "Don't miss out on this wonderful opportunity to see them perform — they are amazing."

Also part of the center is a new drama classroom known as a "black box theater" because of its capacity for supporting a wide variety of small performances. According to School Board member Charlotte Bialek, this is a must-see.

"Once there, you find yourself immersed in a deep blue room with endless possibilities," said Ms. Bialek. "Our students as well as the greater community are sure to enjoy this space in the years to come."

Additions to visual arts include a new 3D art classroom, a TV production room, a dark room, and the Numina Gallery, a student run professional gallery, which will feature the work of several student artists. A video loop showing clips from student performances over the years as well as the building before, during, and after the construction will be shown.

Visitors will also be able to view the new computer-aided design lab in the practical arts department, which will support the teaching of many subjects including architecture, robotics, and engineering.

Updated athletic facilities include a new gymnasium, complete with retractable stadium seating and space for two full-sized basketball courts. The 1950s Gym is being renovated to house a weight room and fitness center enabling students to try out many different exercise options for lifelong health and fitness.

Outside entertainment will include a cappella groups, and a jazz ensemble. The Battle of the Bands will commence at 2 p.m. on the main outdoor stage and Powder Puff Football will take place on the field with freshmen challenging sophomores, and juniors taking on seniors.

Members of the Princeton Symphony Orchestra will host an instrument petting zoo to introduce kids to the instruments of the orchestra.

At John Witherspoon Middle School, the public is invited to tour the new academic wing, the swimming pool area, and the new gym facilities. Visitors to the pool will be offered free coupons for use during Community Swimming times, evenings during the school week when the district encourages residents to use the facility.

Township Postpones Hospital Site Talk; Will Revisit Issue Same Week as Borough

Citing minor changes to prospective zoning for the Princeton Township portion of the University Medical Center at Princeton's Witherspoon Street campus, planners Monday night suspended a discussion about introducing zoning changes for the site that are geared to anticipate the area's redevelopment once the hospital relocates to Plainsboro.

The discussion, which is now scheduled for Township Committee's October 23 hearing, was to follow the Regional Planning Board of Princeton's Thursday night endorsement of prospective zoning for the Princeton Borough portion of the site. Since the entire area straddles the municipal boundary, planners are working with both governing bodies to ensure compatible zoning.

The October 23 discussion could lead to an ordinance introduction, which would come the day before Borough Council is expected to hold a public hearing and take a final vote on its zoning for the site.

Princeton HealthCare System, the hospital's parent, has contracted with Philadelphia developer Lubert-Adler to transform the entire area into a mix of residential, commercial, and office use, but whereas all of the proposed housing and a significant piece of the commercial use will be located in the Borough portion of the site, there is likely to be significant office space, parking, and some commercial areas up for Township Committee consideration.

The Township portion mainly consists of the hospital garage, the Medical Arts Building at the corner of Witherspoon and Henry Avenue, some residences in Harris Road to the east, the hospital's surgical center, and one medical office building. The latter two are likely to be removed, but the Medical Arts Building could be used as office space, and it is almost certain that the garage will remain to provide parking for future development.

After outlining technical changes preventing Township from hearing zoning proposals Monday night, Planning Director Lee Solow recommended a postponement. Those changes, he said, were largely related to the definition of open space — an issue with which the planning board also grappled when changes to the Community Master Plan, as related to the hospital site, were discussed.

Part of the zoning ordinance refers to "open space" as being a wooded or natural area. "Obviously this is not that," Mr. Solow said, adding that landscaped areas accessible to the public could be more accurately identified as open space.

Parking standards and the number of spaces required in the garage also need to be addressed, Mr. Solow said.

Committeeman Chad Goerner asked about creating an overlay zone allowing for the garage to exist within the Township's R-8 zone in a new development. The garage was built through a variance granted by the Township's zoning board, but this new zoning would create a G-1 overlay, specifically suited for the one acre that makes up for the garage.

The planning department, Mr. Solow said, was generally reluctant to offer a blanket permit for garages to be built in that residential zone, which is what ultimately led to the overlay solution for the specific property. The advantage to that, he said, is that it assures that a parking garage will serve any future development on that site, including on the Borough potion of the area. Additionally, if major modifications were needed for the garage, it would facilitate the approval process.

Hesitant Voters Are More Than a Product Of Youthful Ambivalence, Panelists Say

At a symposium composed of activists, legislators, artists, and music industry insiders, the biggest ovation of all was received by a professor whose prolific writings on race, politics, and class issues have made him into an academic superstar.

That was the scene Friday at Princeton University's McCosh Hall when Comel West, a professor of religion at the University, was introduced as a panelist for the Princeton Hip-Hop Symposium. The boisterous applause, smiling faces, and the audience's need to hang on each and every one of his words was not unlike the scene at a rock or hip-hop concert, bringing all new meaning to the term "backpack hip-hop," or, hip-hop with a social, moral, and academic message.

Invited by the campus group Hip-Hop: Art and Life, the panelists were charged to assess the current state of hip-hop, its listeners, and the potential impact music can have on a post-9/11 and post-Hurricane Katrina world. "Sometimes it's going to spill over into the ballot box, and when you're up against the wall, you have to look for all kinds of weaponry," said Prof. West.

In doing so, he said, hip-hop can be used as a tool for change, particularly in government, following the lead of musical movements whose origins are rooted in the black community. "American mainstream is obsessed with black creative genius, but puts a low priority on black social misery," he said, pointing to the blues and jazz movements, as well black-originated trends in fashion, in referencing the apparent neglect of New Orleans' ninth ward in the days following Hurricane Katrina.

U.S. Rep. Maxine Waters (D-Calif.) said that the seeming ambivalence of the 18 to 34 demographic extending from the 2004 presidential elections could be nixed through "important discussions" stemming from recent events, but called on accessible pop mainstream media to encourage that dialogue.

"Every year at the Congressional black caucus, I beg and scramble, and plead to get hip-hop artists to come and do our workshop 'Young, Gifted, and Black,'" she said, hoping to create a bridge between the hip-hop community and the legislature, but thus far, to no avail.

"The artists have done a good job to create their own foundations, but somehow we must connect them organizationally and politically so that we can really create some change," she said, pointing to a "missed opportunity" of renewed energy when hip-hop artist Kanye West, in a telethon to raise money for Katrina victims, offered the now-famous observation: "President Bush doesn't care about black people."

"If we win in changing the direction of public policy," Ms. Water said, "it will take care of how we respond to disasters and where we direct our resources".

Talib Kweli, a prominent rapper in underground hip-hop, said that the youthful political ambivalence Ms. Waters outlined comes largely from a disconnect between politicians and the hip-hop audience. "We talk a lot about politics, and we say that you can't trust the Republicans, and the Democrats seem to be spineless, and the only elections we see are the presidential elections," he said. Mr. Kweli called for more focus on local elections.

But he countered Ms. Waters's claims, saying that the 2004 elections, where candidates "were all trying to see who could sound more Republican," were largely disassociated from a hip-hop audience. "The only person who got up there, and made any sense to a young black person from Brooklyn, was Al Sharpton," he said. "He has a tremendous history here — not all good — but what he said was the closest to the truth and it actually made sense."

Oyako Don
(Chicken & Eggs over Steamed Rice)

Translated from Yappari Oishii: Kihon no Washoku Reshipi (Delicious as Expected: Basic Japanese Cooking Recipes)

Serves 4
7 oz boneless chicken thigh meat
4 eggs
1 onion
Steamed rice
Japanese wild parsley (Mitsuba)
1 tsp rice cooking wine
1 tsp soysauce
2 cups Japanese soup stock (Hondashi)
2 tblsp sugar
½ cup soysaucc

1. Cut chicken into bite-sized portions. Marinate with 1 tsp rice cooking wine and 1 tsp soysauce. Cut onion in half, then into thin, half-circle slices. Boil Japanese wild parsley for about 2 minutes, drain, then chop into 1 inch segments.
2. Bring to a boil 2 cups of Japanese soup stock, 2 tblsp sugar, and ½ cup soysaucc in a saucepan. Japanese soup stock can be purchased by the name of Hondashi at any Asian food supermarkets. Once boiled, remove soup from range.
3. Pour ¼ of the soup into a small frying pan. Add ¼ of the marinated chicken and ¼ of the sliced onions. Boil until cooked.
4. Turn down range to slightly above medium heat. Beat egg gently in a bowl. Pour beaten egg over the boiling soup. Cover for about 20 seconds or until eggs are in a half-cooked state. Slide contents straight from pan onto bowl of steamed rice. Sprinkle chopped Japanese wild parsley over contents in bowl.
5. Repeat steps 3 and 4 to make rest of Oyako Don.

FBI Lending Its Resources To Local Murder Investigation

Still committed to solving a 17-year-old murder mystery, the Princeton Borough Police Department announced last week that it had teamed up with the FBI in hopes of solving the murder of Emily "Cissy" Stuart, who was found stabbed to death in the basement of her Mercer Street home on April 4, 1989.

The revived investigation stems from a September meeting where representatives of the Trenton office of the FBI announced the launching of a new Violent Crimes Task Force, working with municipalities on a number of ongoing investigations, including cold case homicides, said Bill Evanina, a supervisory agent of the Trenton FBI. He added that 19-year department veteran Special Agent John Mulligan has been assigned to the Stuart case.

While the case investigation has been ongoing since it was reopened in 2003 by then Capt. Anthony Federico, now chief, the collaboration will benefit from a number of resources both the Borough and the FBI can provide, Mr. Evanina said.

"We'll benefit forensically and from a behavioral analysis perspective," Mr. Evanina said. "Any help that we can provide to Princeton and the county will help the case move forward.

"We all agree that this is a solvable case."

Mr. Evanina said his department would view the murder as a new case, with a fresh perspective. "Anytime you bring more law enforcement resources into an investigation of any type, you're going to have many eyes looking at the case and the facts.

"Princeton's done a tremendous job in this case, but we're looking for the one big break to send the investigation on its way," he added.

After 9/11, the FBI focused much of its energy and resources on counter-terrorism and counter-intelligence, and while the bureau continues to handle those facets, Mr. Evanina lauded the agency's efforts to refocus on regional and local cases using new technology. "Every month, there's new scientific technology coming out related to forensic evidence and DNA and there are a million cases out there whose investigators would like to have their evidence re-looked at," he said. The evidence amassed by the Borough Police has been sent to the FBI forensic labs in Quantico, Virginia.

Chief Federico credited the "tremendous amount of expertise" that the FBI can provide in bringing the Stuart case to a conclusion.

Then a patrolman, Chief Federico was the first to respond to Ms. Stuart's home and has since been working on the case, but "there are items that, back in 1989, couldn't be tested." Now, with the FBI involvement, they can, he said.

The chief refuted the case's "cold" status, citing "great strides" since reopening it, although, because of the investigation's ongoing status, he could not elaborate on specific revelations.

The investigation did indicate that Ms. Stuart died two days prior to her being found, with an autopsy indicating that her death resulted from a series of stab wounds in the upper back. Mrs. Stuart was the wife of Donald C. Stuart, co-founder of Town Topics, and mother of Jeb Stuart, who owned the paper at the time of her death and sold it in 2001.

Princeton Fire Department Will Stay In Capable Hands During Transition

To the Editor:

Though it is unfortunate that we lost probably the best chief the Princeton Fire Department has had when Pat McAvenia resigned, there are several things that the people of Princeton should know.

First, rest assured that we as the Princeton Fire Department are still an extremely competent emergency response team. Second, like all organizations we have rules and regulations in place to guide us during uncertain times. It is only a matter of a few weeks before the hierarchy will be restored to the Princeton Fire Department. At no time in the past, present, or future have any minor conflicts negatively affected our ability to work together in times of duress. We will continue to do our best to protect our town, its people, buildings, and sense of community.

Fight Against Hunger in Mercer County Getting Help from Supermarket Chains

To the Editor:

We want to alert readers in Princeton to the fact that there is an ongoing fund-raising program in the McCaffrey's and Wegmans supermarkets. At each check-out counter in these stores coupons in $1, $3, and $5 denominations may be added to the customer's grocery bills. The proceeds go directly to the Mercer Street Friends Food Bank.

The Food Bank has been providing food to agencies and churches in Mercer County for more than 20 years. It distributes an average of 1.3 million pounds of food annually to more than 60 organizations.

Hunger is a pressing problem in many parts of our country. The Mercer Street Friends Food Bank is supplying food to many people in Mercer County who would otherwise go hungry.

We extend our warm thanks to the Wegmans and McCaffrey's markets for their cooperation. Please join us in the fight against hunger by making use of the coupons.

21ST CENTURY DENTISTRY
Presented by Michael A. Wasyl, D.D.S.

GOING WITH THE (WHOLE) GRAIN

There is already research to show that eating a diet rich in whole grains lowers a person's risk of developing diabetes and heart disease. Now, a recent study indicates that a diet packed with whole grains may also lower the likelihood of developing gum disease. This finding is based on analysis of the diets and health status of over 34,000 men over a 14-year period. Those men who reported eating the most brown rice, dark breads, popcorn, and other whole grains (about three servings per day) were 23 percent less likely to develop periodontitis (inflammation of the gums that also involves the underlying bones) than those who ate less than one serving of whole grains daily.

This column about the benefits of whole grains has been brought to you in the interest of better dental health. We believe in preventive dentistry. We know that you wish to receive your general dental care from a highly trained, caring staff; therefore, professionalism is very important to you. Our promise to you is that our office will provide you with dental care of the highest quality available, utilizing the most modern procedures and an extremely qualified staff. Please call 609-924-8300 to schedule an appointment. We're located at Montgomery Knoll, 192 Tamarack Circle, Skillman. Our commitment is to relationships of partnership, respect, and appreciation.

P.S. It is thought that eating more whole grains improves glucose metabolism, which lowers blood glucose levels, which reduces the risk of periodontitis.

50th Anniversary of Shopping Center Gives Cause to Thank Its Merchants

To the Editor:

For the 50th Anniversary of the Princeton Shopping Center, we should all recognize its special gift to our community: a beautiful public park, which rivals any I have seen in the world. The flower gardens are gorgeous all through the season. I urge readers to visit them. The summer concerts bring out people of all ages to sit on the lawn with their families and visit with old friends. This is its priceless contribution to help us come together as a community, not just a collection of fine houses. It is funded by the management and merchants of the Princeton Shopping Center, not — as in most public gardens — by tax dollars or volunteers. We owe them a tremendous vote of thanks.

Township Planners, Landowners Thanked For Plan to Access Witherspoon Woods

To the Editor:

On September 28 the Princeton Regional Planning Board approved a plan originated by Friends of Princeton Open Space (FOPOS) to subdivide 0.8 acres from a 3.2-acre lot on Cherry Hill Road, in order to provide better access to John Witherspoon Woods. Currently, the only direct access to John Witherspoon Woods is a trail from Stuart Road that requires a challenging climb through a boulder field, and a trail from Cherry Hill Road that runs along the edge of a private lot through a wetland. Pursuant to the subdivision, a seven-space gravel parking area will be created that will be accessed from Cherry Hill Road, the wetland trail will be eliminated, and a new trail will exit from the parking area. FOPOS believes this will provide much-improved access to one of our more beautiful natural areas, including a lovely stream that has waterfalls after a good rain. The trails in John Witherspoon Woods, which our board members laid out, connect to those in Mountain Lakes Preserve, Community Park North, and Mountain Lakes North. A map of them can be found at our website, FOPOS.org.

We wish to thank members of the Township and Planning Board staff for their help and technical support on this project, as well as the landowners who are selling the 0.8 acre and the immediate neighbors for working with us. We particularly thank Bob Kiser, Township Engineer, and Greg O'Neil, Township Arborist, for their efforts, which include finding a way to locate the parking area so as to avoid cutting any large trees. We also thank our members and other donors who provided the funds to purchase the property. We are donating the purchase price to the Township.

Who Knew? Delaware & Raritan Canal Tow Path Moonlights as Primrose Path

To the Editor:

In her article about moon gardening (Town Topics, October 4), Linda Arntzenius mentions various flowers which open and spread their scent at night. Among them, she mentions the evening primrose (Oenothera). I have recently discovered that the Oenothera grows wild in Princeton along the Delaware & Raritan Canal, both in the diurnal and nocturnal variety. The nocturnal variety is spectacular, since it blossoms instantaneously at dusk, and you can literally see the buds twirl open in front of your eyes. In the summer, if you are lucky, you will also see the luna moth rushing to pollinate the flowers. The two varieties, diurnal and nocturnal, can cross-pollinate, and the diurnal gene is dominant. So, it is not easy to find the nocturnal type, but the attentive and patient observer can find it along the canal.

Founders of Blue Curtain Thank All For Contributions to Free Concerts

To The Editor:

Blue Curtain's summer music series of four free concerts in Pettoranello Gardens concluded on Saturday, September 16 with performances to an appreciative crowd by guitarist Greg Merkle and West African dancers and drummers, Kulu Mele. Other shows included Latin Music and original rock. Photos and audio clips of some of the performances can be seen and heard at www.bluecurtain.org.

As the founders of Blue Curtain, we would like to thank all the volunteers who helped out; the Princeton Township Recreation Department — especially Katie Herlihy — for their help in putting the series together; and all the volunteers who made the series special, especially sound man extraordinaire, Don Holloway, for making everyone sound the way they should. We would also like to thank all the great musicians and dancers who performed, including The Michael Gregory Band, Chris Harford and The Band of Changes, Steve Northeast, Yerbabuena, Ya Esta, The Raf Astor Band, Trio Cristal, Greg Merkle, and Kulu Mele, as well as everyone who attended, making it all worthwhile. We'll do it again.

Environmentalists, Residents Continue Fight Against Ridge Zoning Variance

To the Editor:

After almost a year, the presentation to the Township Zoning Board by Regal Homes, an outside developer, appears to be reaching a conclusion.

This past year, the developer from Orange has presented a series of extensive presentations by paid witnesses from the outside to attempt to make the point that the Princeton Ridge zoning should be changed to permit the development of high density apartments in this ecologically fragile area.

In the September 27 meeting, formal objections were introduced into testimony by local citizens representing the New Jersey chapter of the Sierra Club, the Environmental Commission of Princeton, and the Stony Brook-Millstone Watershed Association.

Testimony of a local resident was also taken. This is a resident whose property will be irrevocably damaged if the zoning is changed from what he relied on when he built his home.

Regal Homes attempted to denigrate the testimony of these local citizens, who presented their heartfelt views on the potential damage that might be done to our community by granting a zoning variance.

From the audience, the debate seems to be one between a well-funded campaign by an outsider, and local citizens with strong feelings about what the community should look like in the future. It will be interesting to see how it plays out. The October 25 meeting at the Township Municipal Complex should be interesting.

The Books We've Lived In: Such Stuff as Readers Are Made Of

Next week I'll be busy setting up the big now-you-see-it, now-you-don't Secondhand Bookstore otherwise known as the Friends of the Princeton Public Library book sale, something I've been doing since 1990. Though I've had excellent help from other volunteers, when it comes to plowing through one year's multitude of donated volumes, day in, day out, I'm the designated hitter who sifts and disposes, sorts and prices. Every week I put fresh donations on the sale shelves located near the windows opposite the reference librarian's ground-floor outpost. At the same time, I try to save special books for the blockbuster that begins with a preview at noon on Friday, October 20. By "special" I don't just mean the art books, coffee table volumes, or limited editions, or even the moderately collectible items that show up every year. I mean the truly unusual stuff, books that have been lived in, books with a past, books that have seen the world and that stand out like exotic interlopers among the newer, more crisply presentable volumes. Even book hawks looking merely to resell the bargains they hope to find would probably admit to being susceptible to the atmosphere and mystery evoked by the crusty old vagabonds that turn up in any reasonably large assortment of used books.

For instance, here's a battered 76-year-old copy of Little House on the Prairie published by E.M. Hale and Company in Eau Claire, Wisconsin. When I put it out for sale, I won't ask more than $2 for it. The back cover is stamped Howbert School, which the Google genies tell me is located in Colorado Springs, Colorado. Also on the back cover is one of those relics of the past, an envelope with a Date Due card still in it, no surprise since the publisher's Cadmus Books were apparently intended for school libraries. Chances are someone at the sale will snap it up in response to the same impulse that moved me to take it home. When you pick up a book like this, it's like reclaiming a piece of your past. Look through the well-turned, time-textured pages and back you go to a two-room country schoolhouse in southern Indiana on a snowy winter afternoon listening to your teacher read about the adventures of Laura, Mary, Charles, and Ma and Pa, and Jack the dog. Open it at random and the wind's howling and Laura's worried about Pa, who's out in the dark where "the terrible howling was" and all of a sudden you remember how hard the wind was howling around the little schoolhouse in the country when the teacher read that passage and how you and your classmates smiled at each other with the shared awareness that life and fiction were coinciding.

Another item of no particular monetary value that found its way here (this one from a school library in Lynchburg, Virginia) was Highroad to Adventure by Howard Pease, a book I would unblushingly place on my list if I were ever asked for a full and honest inventory of the "books that changed your life." I'd also have to list Freddy the Detective by Walter R. Brooks and certain volumes in the Hardy Boys series, especially A Figure in Hiding, the finding of which at the age of 10 was part of my first secondhand bookstore adventure in the days when the stretch of Fourth Avenue between Astor Place and 14th Street was Book Heaven. At that age, the identity of the author was of no special importance. I wasn't interested in Howard Pease or Walter R. Brooks and it didn't matter a bit when I found out that the "Franklin W. Dixon" who wrote the Hardy Boys was a made-up name for a stable of writers. Nor did I yet have any real understanding of the message ranged imposingly over the entrance of the university library, Milton's "A good book is the precious life-blood of a master spirit." In those days it was the life-blood of the reading experience that warmed me, that and the touch of life implicit in a material object that had been passed from reader to reader.

Littering the Margins

Books that have been scribbled in are usually not the sort I put out on the Community Room tables. Our book sale's online advertising promises a "gently used" stock, after all. Every now and then there are exceptions — if the book itself is unusual enough or, if it had belonged, say, to John Berryman or Murray Kempton, or if the marginalia seemed of equal or greater interest than the text. The fact that I still own most of the "great books" I eventually graduated to from the works of Howard Pease has less to do with their sentimental value than with the embarrassingly callow and often simply idiotic comments that I littered the margins with. My handwriting being what it was and is, that alone would be enough to destroy the resale value of any book. My Modern Library Giant editions of Moby Dick and The Brothers Koromazov teem with sophomoronic rhapsodies: page after page of "Yes! Yes! Great! God! Amazing! Fantastic! Wow!" along with a veritable fireworks display of exclamation points on paper already disintegrating under the weight of my passionate underlinings. On the rare occasions when I lost patience with the writing (Melville does go over the top), I'd scribble: "Oh come on, Herman!" In the chapters entitled "A Squeeze of the Hand" and "The Cassock" I lost it completely, filling every inch of the margin, top, bottom, and both sides, with unprintable celebrations of the author's outrageousness. And Melville is nothing if not outrageous. The so-called reviewers of the time thought he'd gone out of his mind.

It wouldn't be fair to blame it all on Mr. D. Hudson Bowman, I suppose, but whenever I look at the mercilessly abused copies of the great books I read (in over my head in the lifeblood of the master spirits), I remember our 9th-grade government teacher at Manhattan's McBurney School standing before us on the first day of class, holding by one ear, in effect, a devastated copy of the textbook we would be using — the spine bent, the covers hanging, every page a plague of underlinings — and bellowing: "If your book doesn't look like this at the end of the term, it's an automatic F!"

Who Needs Extra Texture?

I gave up underlinings and exclamation points after college. At some point my reverence for the book as an object probably helped calm me down. As I became aware of such things as first editions and collectibility, I began to wonder about the part the actual book-object played in the reading experience. The extra texture of a Stephen Crane first edition definitely enriched the pleasure of reading him but my first exposure to his greatness was in a boring Rinehart paperback of The Red Badge of Courage. I once owned an American first edition of Moby Dick that was a joy to open and read around in but I never got into it the way I did in my savagely annotated Modern Library edition. When I made a list of the reading highlights of my life from adolescence on, it soon became obvious that the material essence of the volumes themselves had little to do with the quality of the experience.

Crime and Punishment? Another dull Rinehart College Edition.

Lost Illusions, Cousin Pons, and half a dozen other great Balzacs were in the sterile Penguin Classics series, where the quality of both print and paper was cheap and deadly dull.

The Sound and the Fury? Another dilapidated Modern Library edition. Same with The Great Gatsby. I read both The Catcher in the Rye and Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man in Signet paperbacks. King Lear, Macbeth, and Hamlet: all Signets. Almost without exception, the most unforgettable reading experiences took place in shabby, forgettable surroundings. Even if you subtracted the underlinings, none of those books would be worthy of a place at our sale. They'd go for 50 cents to a buck, at best.

The Ultimate Read

I still have the last page of an Indian edition of The Sound and the Fury, the shabbiest, yellowest, dingiest, humblest setting imaginable for the ultimate read. Admittedly, the associations played a part: bedridden in a Katmandu fleabag called the Himalaya Hotel ("so filthy and rat-infested," according to Gary Snyder's Now India, "that we moved to a hotel a cut better"), with a dirt floor and rats, indeed, eating the walls; one light-bulb overhead; the street dead quiet at night; me in and out of fever; no food beyond digestive biscuits and tea, nothing to read but this sleazy paperback with its laughably lurid cover. My three previuous readings of the novel had been in the aforementioned Modern Library paperback. This one had nothing going for it but its wretchedness. It radiated a squalid but heady Indian charisma, the stuff of the streets; it looked so close to its earthy roots you could imagine putting it in a chillum and smoking it. But between the paper and print, Faulkner, the fever, and Katmandu, the closing chapter of a great book was finally revealed to me. In previous readings the preceding sections had seemed superior because they were the most fascinating and difficult. Not until the last chapter did Faulkner take up the conventional third-person narrative, and not until that reading in the deep after-midnight silence did I appreciate what he'd accomplished or realize that the concluding scene was possibly the most moving moment in all of his work. (In interviews through the years, he always named The Sound and the Fury as his "most splendid failure.") It was as if each word were glowing with meaning, as if the murky paper were giving off warmth and light, as if I were comprehending exactly the balance, depth, and weight the author had intended for each sentence, every nuance, every measured movement on the way to the last words "as cornice and facade flowed smoothly once more from left to right; post and tree, window and doorway, and signboard, each in its ordered place."

Local Storyteller/Author Signing Book at Borders

Susan Danoff will sign copies of her newly published book The Golden Thread: Storytelling in Teoching ond Leorning (Storytelling Arts Press, 2006) at Borders Books, Nassau Park Boulevard, October 17, at 7 p.m.

Written for educators, parents, and storytellers, The Golden Thread discusses ways in which stories transform relationships and classroom dynamics and storytelling as a valuable bridge to reading and writing, especially for children who come from cultures that value the spoken over the written word.

In addition to discussions on classroom culture, relationships, imagination, and literacy, each section of The Golden Thread begins with a story, to remind readers of "the magic of the tale."

Author and storyteller Diane Wolkstein has written of The Golden Thread: "Next best to having Susan visit your classroom telling six of the magical stories in the book is to own the book itself, to refresh your understanding of the importance and value of storytelling."

Ms. Danoff, who has produced three audio recordings: Enchontments, The Invisible Woy: Stories of Wisdom, and Women of Vision, began her storytelling career in 1979. She was the first storyteller to work as an artist-in-residence for the New Jersey State Council on the Arts, Artists-in-Education Program.

She is executive director of Storytelling Arts, Inc., a nonprofit corporation she founded in 1996 to provide long-term storytelling programs to low-income and special needs school children and their teachers in New Jersey.

Storytelling Arts reaches 1,500 to 2,000 children each year and holds an intensive weeklong summer storytelling institute for teachers at Princeton University each summer.

"What we could afford to give the property owner was much less than what they wanted," said Shirleen Roberts, who served as the developer's legal representation through the planning process for the prospective Township development.

Hovnanian's pullout does not necessarily preclude another developer from coming in, this time with development precedent, and building senior housing on the property, barring drastic changes to the site plan. "We still have time to assign other good builders to continue on that site," said Laura Lowe of Short Hills, who, along with her husband William, owns the property. It is, however, too soon to tell if another developer is waiting in the wings, she added.

"It's certainly a disappointment to us, as I imagine it is to the Township, but after all, it's Princeton, and it's a good piece of property and there are a lot of people who are interested," Ms. Lowe added.

Echoing Ms. Roberts, Ms. Lowe said the Township could widen the market attraction if it were to change the zoning for the area to allow 55-and-up housing rather than placing the minimum age at 62. "A lot of developers are worried, they're nervous, and Hovnanian was talking with the Township, but somehow, they weren't able to lower the age, and right after that, they sort of backed out," Ms. Lowe said, but added that the Township did "do the right thing to zone that area for senior housing.

"But unfortunately, right before Hovnanian was ready to go ahead, the market slowed down."

Township officials have indicated that the age restrictions were negotiable at the eleventh hour after Hovnanian said it would not build on that site, but at that point, it appears that the market factor had already convinced the developer and negotiations ceased.

"I know that the housing market is not what it was, but this project was so embraced by so many different groups in this community, I really thought it would go forward," said Township Mayor Phyllis Marchand, adding that Hovnanian's pulling out of the project was a "big disappointment."

The Township designated the Bunn Drive site, as well as a tract along Mt. Lucas Road, as part of a senior overlay zone in 2001 in an effort to increase market rate senior housing within the Township. That designation, in part, stemmed from the opening of Stonebridge, a retirement community in Montgomery where many former Princeton seniors now live.

A proposal to build a 48-unit development of market-value senior housing is still being reviewed by the joint-municipal planning department, but that application has been stalled for several years now. The developer, Inteil, had initially proposed over 100 units before Hovnanian approached the Township and the Lowes, and has repeatedly revised their plan over the years.

Outside of that overlay zone, another developer, Regal Homes, is seeking zoning variances to build 98 55-and-up units across from the former Hovnanian site, this time on a two-parcel, 14-acre tract on the eastern side of Bunn in both the Township's OR-2 and R-2 zones. Frank Petrino, an attorney representing Regal throughout the zoning process, said it was possible, but unlikely, for now, that his client would seek the tract in the overlay, largely because that site is already zoned for 62-and-up. "That was something the Township put into their ordinance, and it's something they might want to rethink," Mr. Petrino said.

Interest in moving the Regal application to the former Hovnanian site is "something that certainly seems logical," Mr. Petrino added, while making clear that his client's current application would stand as is. That development proposal faces an ongoing battle stemming from several environmental concerns related to the slope of the site and a potential increase of stormwater runoff.

ART

Canning and Greenblat On Exhibit at Gallery 14

A joint exhibit featuring two of Gallery 14's member photographers will open on Friday, October 13.

Marilyn Canning's "Of Gardens and Guardians: The Vizcaya Project" and Ed Greenblat's "Costa Rica: People, Places and Just One Monkey" will open with an October 13 reception for the public from 6 to 9 p.m. and will continue through November 12. Meet the photographers on Sunday, October 15, from 1 to 3 p.m.

Marilyn Canning's fascination with Vizcaya began over ten years ago when, by chance, she discovered this historic landmark in Miami, Florida. Since that first visit, she has been drawn to Vizcaya over half a dozen times in the past decade. Through her many visits, she has created a visual record of the gardens and guardians of Vizcaya. It is these guardians of Vizcaya — the statues, mythological creatures, and pagan gods who keep a watchful eye over their domain — that she found so intriguing and which she has spent considerable time documenting.

The photographs are selenium toned silver prints. Each photograph has been printed using varying degrees of light diffusion as a means to capture the haunting aspects of Vizcaya and its guardians.

Costa Rica

Ed Greenblat challenged himself to record glimpses of Costa Rica that are seen less often than the lush landscapes and abundant animal life. After recording the striking and at times garish color schemes of the house and shops, he turned his attention to the people. In one picture a bright yellow church with its strikingly white cross contrasts with the green of the tropical tress in the background, creating a color contrast that emphasizes the flowing and manmade lines of the church roof. The man attending a coffee shop has a shirt nearly as colorful as the blue block wall with its indicative steaming coffee sign.

And then, of course, there's the monkey...

CAPPS' Gallery Presents Exhibit by Frank Rivera

The Community Arts Partnership at the Peddie School (CAPPS) will be presenting an exhibit of the work of Frank Rivera from October 20 through November 3, with an opening reception and gallery talk on October 20 from 6:30 to 8 p.m. in the Mariboe Gallery on the Peddie Campus.

Frank Rivera's work has been shown at various prominent venues throughout the world, including the Whitney Biennial during the 1970s and the New Jersey State Museum as well as two former exhibits at the Mariboe Gallery. His studies include degrees from the Yale School of Art, University of Pennsylvania, and the Cleveland Institute of Art. Gradually becoming disillusioned with abstract art, he abandoned his large-scale abstractions in favor of a much smaller scale and a narrative approach. The serial format of the new smaller works showed the influence of storyboard graphics and computer art. Other influences were the underground comics of the mid-1980s and a reawakened interest in the art of the predella, small serial panels affixed to the bottom of an altarpiece. To learn more, visit www.frivera0828.com.

Gallery hours are from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday. For more information, call (609) 490-7550 or visit www.peddie.org/capps.

Waldorf Student Art On View at Small World

Small World Coffee on Witherspoon Street will be showing artwork by Waldorf School students throughout the month of October.

The show highlights the watercolors done by students in grades 1 through 8, an artistic activity that is developed through the grades. Ceramic Greek vases from the 5th grade study of ancient civilizations will also be shown.

The whole Waldorf curriculum is based on the principle that creative work in the arts is a necessary stimulus for the healthy development of the whole child as well as an effective aid to learning. The arts engage traditional and nontraditional learners equally, enhancing critical thinking skills, building self-esteem, self-discipline, and encouraging cooperation and multicultural understanding. By practicing a variety of arts, a student can develop faculties and forms of intelligence.

In Waldorf schools, from kindergarten through the fifth grade, the children paint using the wet-on-wet method, the application of watercolors to damp paper. At this age children are still in the "relatively dreamy stage of childhood." This method stresses the "flow and life of the water and luminosity" of the colors on the damp paper and their interaction, creating from color without the initial need to create forms or figures. The hope is to develop the students' critical thinking, self-discipline and artistic sensibilities.

STUDENT ART: The Waldorf School's wet-on-wet method employing "the flow and life of the water" can be seen in this water color, which will be among the student art on view through October at Small World Coffee on Witherspoon Street.

MUSIC REVIEW

Princeton Tigertones Celebrate Sixty Years With Chanticleer and High Harmony

If San Francisco Chanticleer had been around sixty years ago, when Princeton University's a cappella Tigertones was founded, the two vocal ensembles would no doubt have been instant collaborators and musical "best friends for life." Chanticleer may have set the recent standard for a cappella vocal performance in this country, but all-male ensembles have been flourishing on university campuses for generations, with the Tigertones one of the oldest at Princeton University. These two ensembles came together Friday night in Richardson Auditorium in a concert presented by the Princeton Tigertones Alumni Association to celebrate the Tigertones's 60th anniversary. Although the Tigertones and Chanticleer unfortunately did not perform any numbers together, their two separate "acts," presented to a nearly sold-out house at Richardson, were each full of precise and well-tuned choral singing.

The vocal tradition of the Tigertones has been primarily the lighter works of popular arrangements and vocal jazz, and the twelve members of the ensemble began the evening with forty minutes of their best work. The voices of the Tigertones are young and fresh, and these singers have obviously been trained in the merits of uniform vowel production, which kept the tuning intact. Senior Tim Callahan is listed as Music Director (and kept musical flow going through much of the concert), but these singers could easily lead themselves. The members of Tigertones also doubled as soloists; one of the downsides of the ensemble's fully democratic approach is that the soloists were not identified, but all were excellent in their own way. The vocal background of each piece was well blended, with an especially good low bass sound on their arrangement of Eric Clapton's "You Look Wonderful Tonight." The ensemble seemed to thrive on clearly-defined cadences (such as in "My Girl"), and the tuning was particularly commendable in the high registers of Paul McCartney's "Long and Winding Road" (an especially tricky arrangement).

The twelve voices of Chanticleer were understandably more mature and the range of the voices extended through the alto and soprano registers, but Chanticleer shared the same vocal exactness and clarity of the Tigertones. Chanticleer focused much of its presentation on classical choral literature, ranging from a medieval chant to 20th century French impressionism. The ensemble is renowned for its performance of music of the Renaissance period, and their presentation of Palestrina's motet "Veni Sponsa Christi" did not disappoint in its perfect octaves and clean soprano sound. The subsequent arrangement of the same piece by French composer Jean Yves Daniel-Lesur brought out the ensemble's ability to maneuver tone clusters and driving harmonies, creating the effect of bells.

The ensemble continued its journey through contemporary choral repertoire within the evening's theme of "Love's Messengers," with the most interesting vocal effects coming from British composer John Tavener's "Village Wedding." Tavener's music is rooted in his two decades in the Russian Orthodox Church, as well as his travels through the world to experience the music of other religions. Chanticleer presented this work performing in a circle, the octave tunings were pure and the shifts between major and minor (marked by the typical Tavener vocal drones) were clean. Jeeyoung Kim's arrangement of the Jindo Arirang folksong from the South Jeollo Province of Korea also allowed the ensemble to explore a more nasal and rough vocal tone, followed by a sublime arrangement of the well-known Hawaiian Aloha Oe. Long-time Music Director Joseph Jennings joined the ensemble for their closing set of jazzy and popular works, always a huge hit with audiences.

Friday night's concert presented some of the best vocal singing of Princeton University, together with the ensemble at the top of the heap in a cappella male singing. The Tigertones have a shared link with Chanticleer in one of their graduates, who was part of Chanticleer for several years. Hopefully, this collaboration will last long into the future.

Vladimir Ovchinnikov

Princeton Symphony To Open New Season Sunday, October 22

The Princeton Symphony Orchestra will open its 2006-07 season on Sunday, October 22 at Richardson Auditorium with a 4 p.m. concert featuring the Russian piano virtuoso Vladimir Ovchinnikov performing Voriotions on o Nursery Song by Ernst Dohnányi. A free lecture will precede the concert at 3 p.m. with musicologist Gene DeLisa. Mr. DeLisa will provide insights on the composers and the pieces that will be performed.

The program, selected by Music Director Mark Laycock, will also include Richard Strauss' virtuosic showpiece Don Juon and Brahms' 4th Symphony.

The powerful Don Juon draws on a wide range of orchestral colors to depict the title character in dramatic scenes from his infamous conquests to his ultimate reckoning.

Hungarian composer Ernst Dohnányi is best known for his Voriotions on o Nursery Song, a witty composition based on the French nursery song, Ah, Vous Diroije, Maman, or Twinkle Twinkle Little Star. Following a dramatic introduction, the familiar melody is simply stated in its entirety by the piano. From there the composer crafts 11 variations, filled with musical references to both Brahms and Strauss, ending with a fugue. The difficult piano concertante will be performed by Mr. Ovchinnikov.

The program will close with Brahms' 4th Symphony, an audience favorite since its premiere in 1885. The work integrates medieval church modes, Baroque variations, and classical sonata forms.

Mr. Ovchinnikov, one of Russia's foremost pianists, was the First Prize winner at the 1987 Leeds International Piano Competition. Since his debut recital at the Barbican in 1987, he has appeared with the Chicago Symphony, Montreal Symphony, and all of the major London orchestras. He was described by The Independent of London as "an immaculate performer with impeccable taste and a sense of deep repose, even when confronted by the most extravagant technical demands."

Named Russia's Artist of the Year in 2005, Mr. Ovchinnikov performs frequently with leading Russian orchestras such as the Moscow Philharmonic, Moscow Radio Symphony, and the St. Petersburg Philharmonic. His CDs include compilations of Liszt, Prokofiev, and Rachmaninov for EMI Classics, as well as Mussorgsky's Pictures ot on Exhibition.

Founded in 1980 as the Little Orchestra of Princeton, the Princeton Symphony Orchestra performs classical masterworks as well as works by contemporary composers. It also offers pops concerts and entertains more than 10,000 schoolchildren each year through BRAVO!, its in-school educational series, and its children's concerts in Richardson Auditorium. The Orchestra's classical season will continue on November 12 with a concert of musical Impressionists. On January 21, its annual concert in memory of Edward T. Cone, a founding board member, will feature Schubert's Unfinished Symphony. The annual family Holiday Concert with the Princeton High School Choir will take place on December 16, a Broadway Pops concert on February 3. Additional concerts are scheduled for March 11 and April 15, 2007.

Five-concert classical series subscriptions and single tickets are available by calling the PSO at (609) 497-0020. Complete season information can be found at www.princetonsymphony.org. Single tickets, ranging in price from $15 to $60, may also be purchased at the Richardson Auditorium box office by calling (609) 258-5000.

Versatile Singer Here For Folk Music Concert

Singer-songwriter Bob Zentz will return to Princeton for a performance at 8:15 p.m. on Friday, October 20, at Christ Congregation Church, sponsored by the Princeton Folk Music Society.

Mr. Zentz has issued five recordings, including one with musicians Rick Epping and Rick Lee as the group Scuttlebutt. Some of his original compositions, such as In My Time, Sweet Song from Yesterday, It's About Time, and Some Trust in Chariots, have become folk music classics. His concerts have been described as mosaics of contemporary, traditional, and original songs, tunes, and chat, linked by his philosophic perspective and humor. He plays a variety of instruments to accompany his repertory of over 2,000 songs, ranging from Celtic tunes and ballads to science fiction songs and sea chanteys.

A regular performer at folk music festivals, Mr. Zentz has also presented programs at numerous libraries, museums, and Elderhostel events. "He has it all," wrote the Scottish newspaper The Scotsman, "a bag of strikingly attractive songs, a pleasing voice, and mastery of a variety of stringed things."

Pridonoff Piano Duo To Perform at TCNJ

The College of New Jersey Music Department will welcome the Pridonoff Duo for a piano master class on Wednesday, October 18 at 12:30 p.m. and in a piano recital on Thursday, October 19 at 8 p.m. Both events will be held in the school's Mildred & Ernest E. Mayo Concert Hall. The concert is free and open to the public.

Elizabeth and Eugene Pridonoff formed the Pridonoff Duo in 1982, making their formal debut with the Cincinnati Chamber Orchestra under the direction of Paul Nadler, and in New York's Tully Hall and the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. in 1986. They have since performed throughout Europe, Asia, and North America.

For the past decade, the Pridonoffs have made regular visits to Asia including residencies and performances in China, Hong Kong, Korea, Taiwan, and Japan. During the summers they serve on the faculties of the Prague International Piano Master Classes, the Amalfi Coast Music Festival, the international Barcelona Festival, and International Piano Week of Belgium. They now serve as Duo-in-Residence and professors of piano at the University of Cincinnati, College-Conservatory of Music. In March 2004 they were appointed International Steinway Artists.

Reviewing a recital by the duo in Tully Hall, New York Times critic John Rockwell called the Pridonoffs' performance "charming, with a crisp, precise style that is buoyant and rhythmically alive, and marked by impressive unanimity of attack."

HIS FORTE IS THE FORTEPIANO: A Nassau at Six favorite, keyboard artist Trevor Stephenson will return to Nassau Presbyterian Church, 61 Nassau Street, for a free lecture/recital this Sunday, October 15 at 6 p.m. A post-performance dinner with the artist will begin at 7 p.m., by reservation only. Mr. Stephenson's program, "From Quill to Hammer," will explore the dramatic shift in sound and expression that occurred during the 18th century, when the clarity and idealism of the plucked-string keyboard instrument, the harpsichord, gave way to the struck-string instrument, the forteplano. Featuring Mr. Stephenson's custom built 17th century Flemish harpsichord and 18th century fortepiano, the program will include works by Bach, Handel, Mozart, Haydn, and Beethoven, along with a discussion on how each composer's style of writing explores the expressive range of their particular instrument. The cost of the dinner is $5 for adults and $2 for children. For reservations, call the church office by noon today at (609) 924-0103.

Boychoir to Perform Paul McCartney Work At American Premiere

The American Boychoir will perform in the North American premiere of Paul McCartney's Ecce Cor Meum (Behold My Heart), an oratorio for chorus and orchestra, on Tuesday, November 14 at Carnegie Hall at 7:30 p.m. The UK premiere will take place at Royal Albert Hall in London on November 3.

The 50-minute piece, a choral and orchestral work in four movements composed by Mr. McCartney, will be performed at Carnegie Hall by The Boychoir, The Concert Chorale of New York, and the Orchestra of St. Luke's, conducted by Gavin Greenaway. Soprano Kate Royal will be the soloist.

The first half of the concert will include other works by Sir Paul, who will not participate in the performance.

Anthony Smith, president of Magdalen College from 1998 to 2005, asked the former Beatle to compose a work celebrating the opening of the college's new concert hall. The first version of Ecce Cor Meum was performed with the Magdalen College Choir at Oxford's Sheldonian Theatre in November 2001. In a statement, Mr. McCartney said this early performance taught him a great deal. "Eventually I made it all come together through correcting a lot of misapprehensions; a lot was learned before the Sheldonian performance, but a lot of it was learned afterwards," he said. "If it had been a Beatles song, I would have known how to do it. But this was a completely different ball game."

Ecce Cor Meum is Mr. McCartney's fourth classical album. His first, The Liverpool Orotorio, was released in 1991.

Tickets range from $35 to $125, with a six-ticket limit, and may be ordered by calling Carnegie Charge at (212) 247-7800.

"Chevalier: Maurice & Me" Coming to Peddie School

The Light Sundays Series at Hightstown's Peddie School will continue on Sunday, November 12 at 2 p.m. with Chevalier: Maurice & Me, starring Tony Sandler, in Peddie's William Mount-Burke Theater. The series is a program of The Community Arts Partnership at the Peddie School (CAPPS).

Chevalier: Maurice and Me follows the famous singer Maurice Chevalier on a roller coaster ride from savvy street urchin to an international legend adored by royalty and commoner alike. Resilient and driven by his wish to cheer up a public torn by one world war and then another, Mr. Chevalier carried out his mission with a spirit of hope and joie de vivre. Maurice & Me is a tribute to the singer's courage and noble purpose.

Mr. Sandler's fame came early in Europe. An entertainer and recording artist, he rose to stardom on stage, television, and screen prior to his 1963 debut in the U.S. He has since appeared in the world's leading nightclubs and theaters, including 20 years with the duo Sandler and Young. He has been a frequent guest on the Ed Sullivan, Dean Martin, and Merv Griffin television variety shows, and Johnny Carson's Tonight Show.

Tickets are $16 and may be purchased by calling (609) 490-7550.

Chopin Concert to Employ Replica of Viennese Piano

Princeton University Concerts will present American pianist Edmund Battersby in a program entitled Chopin: Then and Now tomorrow evening, October 12 at 8 p.m. in Richardson Auditorium. Mr. Battersby will perform on the Steinway "D" Concert Grand and also on a replica of an 1825 Conrad Graf Viennese pianoforte by Rodney J. Regier of Freeport, Maine.

The program, consisting entirely of works of Frédéric Chopin, will begin on the Graf replica with the Ballade in F Minor, Nocturne in B Major, three Impromptus, and four valses. In the second half of the program Mr. Battersby will play the Nocturne in E-flat Major, three Mazurkas, and the Sonata in B Minor, all on the Steinway.

Described by The New York Times as "a pianist of uncommon refinement," Mr. Battersby is a member of the faculty at Indiana University School of Music in Bloomington. He was educated at The Juilliard School, where upon graduation he won the prestigious Alumni Award. He made his London recital début at Wigmore Hall, his New York recital début at Alice Tully Hall. As a chamber musician, he has performed with many ensembles including the Tokyo, Vermeer, and Orion String Quartets. His orchestral appearances include the Pittsburgh and New Jersey Symphony Orchestras.

Throughout his career, Mr. Battersby has been fascinated with historic models of the early piano which has led to a deeper understanding of the tonal qualities of the modern instrument. The October 12 program will offer an unusual opportunity to hear Chopin's music performed on an instrument similar to the one on which he made his Viennese début in 1831. The Graf pianos were owned not only by Beethoven but also by Robert and Clara Schumann, Mendelssohn, Liszt, and Brahms.

Tickets priced from $20 to $40 may be obtained at the Richardson Auditorium box office beginning at 1 p.m. tomorrow, or reserved by telephone by calling (609) 258-5000.

Recital by Baritone Set At Taplin Auditorium

On Wednesday evening, October 25 at 8 p.m. in Taplin Auditorium, The Friends of Music at Princeton will present baritone Lee Gregory, the 2006 winner of New York's Joy in Singing Competition. Michael Baltzer will assist at the piano. The recital is presented in conjunction with Joy in Singing of New York.

The first half of the program will begin with songs of Johann Karl Gottfried Loewe, and conclude with Robert Beaser's cycle The Seven Deodly Sins on texts by Anthony Hecht. The second half will include the cycle Colligrommes by Francis Poulenc and songs by Charles Ives.

Also a winner of the Licia Albanese Puccini Foundation Competition, Mr. Gregory is an avid recitalist who made his Boston début at the Hammond Concert Series. In 2005, he sang Mr. Marshall in Blitzstein's Regino at Bard's SummerScape Festival. He made his New York City Opera début during 2003-04 as Morales in Bizet's Cormen. He has also sung the title role in Mozart's Don Giovonni, Escamillo in Cormen, and Melchior in Menotti's Amahl ond the Night Visitors with the Opera Company of Brooklyn. He has also performed with the Des Moines Metro Opera, New Jersey State Opera, and Trinity Repertory Company.

The concert is open to the public without admission charge.

SONGWRITER SUPREME: John Hiatt, whose songs have been recorded by pop, rock, folk, and country singers from Bonnie Raitt and Linda Ronstadt to B.B. King and Eric Clapton, will return to McCarter Theatre on Tuesday, October 17 at 7:30 p.m. Recently heard at McCarter with his colleagues Lyle Lovett, Joe Ely, and Guy Clark, the master singer-songwriter will on this occasion present a rare solo acoustic evening — just his voice and his guitar. In the course of his 35-year career, Mr. Hiatt has produced 20 CDs, including "Crossing Muddy Waters," "Stolen Moments," "Slow Turning," and last year's "Master of Disaster." Tickets range from $30 to $38, and may be ordered by calling (609) 258-2787 or by visiting www.mccarter.org.

Irish-Canadian Musicians, Leahy, at State Theatre

Hot on the heels of their first PBS special, the Irish-Canadian musical group Leahy will return to New Brunswick's State Theatre on Sunday, October 29 at 3 p.m. The ensemble of eight brothers and sisters will perform music from their latest album, In All Things.

The Leahy siblings — Donnell, Maria, Siobheann, Frank, Agnes, Doug, Eric, and Angus — have combined to form a fiddle-driven band that blends the influence of their Irish and Scottish roots with their own musical interests. Complemented by dance, vocals, keyboard, and percussion, the sound is a mix of musical genres simply referred to by fans as "Leahy."

What began as a family tradition spurred by two talented parents in Lakefield, Ontario has become a phenomenon leading to an Academy Award-winning documentary in 1985 for Best Student Foreign Film, several international tours, and, most recently, the PBS special in August that brought Leahy's innovative music directly to fans across the country.

After a brief break in the early '90s, the band reunited in 1999 for a world tour with Shania Twain. They have since recorded two more albums.

Tickets range from $25 to $50, with group, college student, and senior discounts available. To order, call the State Theatre box office at (732) 246-7469, or visit www.StateTheatreNJ.org.

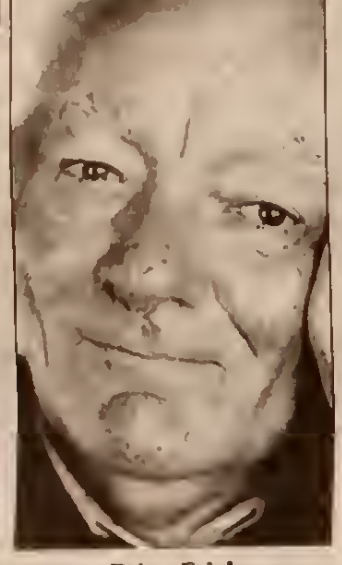
"Translations" to Open This Friday at McCarter

McCarter Theatre has announced the full cast for its new production of Translations by Brian Friel, which will have its official opening this Friday, October 13 at 8 p.m. and run through October 29. The co-production with the Manhattan Theatre Club will be directed by Tony Award winner Garry Hynes.

In 1981, the Manhattan Theatre Club produced the American premiere of Translations. Twenty-five years later, the themes of the play are as timely as ever. Clashing cultures and tragedies of miscommunication unfold in Mr. Friel's invented Irish county of Ballybeg, a place he has explored in his plays Dancing at Lughnasa, Aristocrats, and Molly Sweeney. The play depicts the power of language to unite and divide people in a time of cultural imperialism.



Brian Friel

The cast will include Niall Buggy, David Costabile, Alan Cox, Dermot Crowley, Michael FitzGerald, Morgan Hallett, Geraldine Hughes, Susan Lynch, Graeme Malcolm, and Chandler Williams.

A Dialogue on Drama with Ms. Hynes and Fiach Mac Conghail, artistic director of the Abbey Theatre, will take place immediately following the 2 p.m. performance this Sunday. One need not attend the performance to attend the dialogue.

Widely considered Ireland's foremost modern playwright, Mr. Friel was born in Omagh, County Tyrone, and now lives in Donegal. In 2005, The Home Place opened at The Gate Theatre in Dublin and subsequently transferred to the Comedy Theatre in London. His other works include The Enemy Within (1962), Philadelphia, Here I Come! (1964), The Loves of Cass McGuire (1966), The Mundy Scheme (1969), The Gentle Island (1971), The Freedom of the City (1973), Aristocrats (1979), Faith Healer (1979), Making History (1988), Dancing at Lughnasa (1990), Wonderful Tennessee (1993), Molly Sweeney (1994), Give Me Your Answer, Do! (1997), The Bear (2002), Afterplay (2002), and Performances (2003), among many others. His awards include a Tony Award for Dancing At Lughnasa. He is an honorary member of both the Royal Society of Literature and the American Academy of Arts and Letters. In 1999 he was awarded a Lifetime Achievement Award by the Irish Times.

Ms. Hynes founded Druid Theatre Company in 1975 and worked as its artistic director from 1975 to 1991, and again from 1995 to the present. She has received honorary doctorates from the University of Dublin, The National University of Ireland, and the National Council for Education Awards. In 1998 on Broadway, she became the first woman to receive a Tony Award for direction, for The Beauty Queen of Leenane. Her other awards include The Irish Times/ESB Irish Theatre Award for Best Director in 2002 and a Special Tribute Award for her contribution to Irish Theatre in 2005.

Performances of Translations will be Wednesdays and Thursdays at 7:30 p.m., Fridays at 8 p.m., Saturdays at 3 and 8 p.m., and Sundays at 2 p.m., with an additional performance on Sunday, October 22 at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets range from $33 to $48 depending on the day and time of the performance, and may be purchased by calling (609) 258-2787 or by visiting www.mccarter.org.

Kelsey Theatre to Stage "Mrs. Basil E. Frankweiler"

The kids will be on the case when From The Mixed Up Files of Mrs. Basil E. Frankweiler arrives at Mercer County Community College's Kelsey Theatre on Saturday, October 28 at 2 and 4 p.m. Based on the E.L. Konigsburg Newberry Medal-winning book, the show will be presented by ArtsPower National Touring Theatre.

The drama follows Claudia Kincaid and her brother Jamie as they run away to The Metropolitan Museum of Art, and right into the middle of a major museum mystery. As they seek to discover the origins of one of the museum's prized new statues, they make a most unusual friend in the eccentric, strong-minded Mrs. Basil E. Frankweiler. With her help, they learn lessons of friendship, self-discovery, and responsibility.

The show was adapted and directed by ArtsPower artistic director Greg Gunning.

Founded in 1985 by Mark and Gary Blackman, ArtsPower has become one of America's leading producers of professional theatre for young and family audiences, the second largest such company in the nation. Its 16 touring productions have been seen by more than five million people in 40 states, and in such cultural centers as the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. and Lincoln Center in New York.

Tickets are $8 for children and seniors, $10 for adults, and may be ordered by calling the Kelsey box office at (609) 570-3333.

For a complete listing of adult and children's events at the theater, visit www.kelseytheatre.net or call the box office.

Peddie Players Honored For Theatrical Excellence

The Community Arts Partnership at the Peddie School (CAPPS) has announced that the school's Peddie Players have won a Perry Award for Outstanding Production of an Original Play. The award was presented by New Jersey Association of Community Theatres in recognition of CAPPS' production of Luigi Jannuzzi's Exhibit This!, a contemporary play set in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City.

Exhibit This! was submitted as a reading for the school's Dramatist Workshop Series, but CAPPS felt the play was developed enough to present in its Summer Theater Series and thus presented six sold-out performances in the summer of 2005. The production was directed by Michael Gallagher and produced by Robert Rund.

CAPPS also received two other nominations from the production, Marilyn Anker for outstanding lighting design and Laura Jackson-Novia for outstanding featured actress.

The Dramatists Workshop Series offers a forum for the reading of new works, particularly those by New Jersey playwrights. Works-in-progress are presented as rehearsed staged readings. Audiences are invited to participate in discussions with the artists following the readings.

The New Jersey Association of Community Theatres is a non-profit corporation dedicated to recognizing achievements by artists of all disciplines involved in the performance and production of community theater in the state.

Lecture Subject at MCCC: Photography and Terrorism

Richard B. Woodward, a journalist, critic, New York Times columnist, and filmmaker, will present a talk on photography, crime, and terrorism at Mercer County Community College on Thursday, October 26 at noon. The free lecture, part of MCCC's Distinguished Lecture Series, will be held at the college's West Windsor campus in the Communications Building at 1200 Old Trenton Road.

Richard Woodward

Based on an article he is preparing for The Atlantic Monthly, Mr. Woodward will discuss the relationship between photography and crime, the history of the medium as an evidence and truth-gathering tool, new and problematic developments in surveillance technology, and the peculiar, recent status of the photograph itself as a crime and the photographer as an enemy of the state. His talk is titled "Too Many Cameras or Too Few? Photography in the Age of Terrorism."

In addition to The Atlantic Monthly, Mr. Woodward's articles have appeared in The New Yorker, The Village Voice, and The New Criterion. A regular contributor to The New York Times since 1986, he writes the newspaper's Armchair Traveler book review column for the travel section. His essays on contemporary photography have appeared in more than 20 monographs. He has been a visiting critic at Columbia University's Graduate School of the Arts, Rhode Island School of Design, Massachusetts College of Art, and CUNY Purchase.

Mr. Woodward attended Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., graduating with a B.A. in English in 1975.

Hong Kong Crime Caper Is Quintessential Scorcese Saga

Massachusetts State Trooper Billy Costigan (Leonardo DiCaprio) is masquerading as an ex-con in order to infiltrate a South Boston (Southie) crime family run by mobster Frank Costello (Jack Nicholson). Meanwhile, Colin Sullivan (Matt Damon), a mole, has penetrated the police department, climbing the ranks until he gains access to the plans of the Special Investigations Unit (SIU), thereby enabling Costello to keep one step ahead of the law.

Initially unaware of each other's existence, Costigan and Sullivan, both native sons of Southie, operate inside some of the same circles, frequently coming close to crossing paths. The tension mounts as the police and the crooks gradually become aware that their movements are being telegraphed to the other side. Costigan and Sullivan find themselves caught in a life and death race to expose and eliminate the other first.

They unknowingly share a romantic interest in Madolyn (Vera Farmiga), a psychiatrist who specializes in counseling cops. She's dating Colin, ignorant of his allegiance to the Mafia; and also seeing Billy as a patient, keeping his confidences as he vents about the rigors of leading a double life.

This game of cops and robbers is the plot for The Departed, directed by Martin Scorcese. The gangster film is actually a remake of Infernal Affairs (2002), the first of a trilogy created by Hong Kong's Siu Fai Mak.

The mystery movie features a plethora of peripheral characters lurking in the shadows. For instance, there's Captain Queenan (Martin Sheen) and Sergeant Dignam (Mark Wahlberg), Costigan's only contacts in the department; and then there's Chief Ellerby (Alec Baldwin), Sullivan's suspicious boss at SIU, and his colleague Officer Brown (Anthony Anderson).

On the mob's side, we find a mix of characters, most notably, Mr. French (Ray Winstone), Costello's henchman.

Relying on an intricate, absorbing script which cleverly conceals its lurid twists, The Departed unfolds at a breakaway pace. Tautly edited to maximize tension, this movie might be considered a cinematic masterpiece, were it not for the emotionally numbing bloodbath it unfortunately becomes.

Despite the Damon DiCaprio cat-and-mouse maneuvers, it is Jack Nicholson's jaunty Costello who steals the show, humoring a roomful of mobsters one minute, and exacting retribution the next. DiCaprio is second best, delivering the most spellbinding performance of his career as a terribly tormented soul who has lost his sense of self.

A masterpiece marred unnecessarily by gratuitous gore.

Very good (★★★). Rated R for pervasive profanity, ethnic slurs, drug use, frank sexuality, and gruesome violence.

Running time: 149 minutes. Studio: Warner Brothers.

PRINCETON PERSONALITY

Princeton Ballet School Director Mary Pat Robertson Strives to Help Students Discover the Joy of Dance

Mary Pat Robertson is a dancer. She is a teacher. She is a role model. It is her great joy that she is able to combine all of these skills in her capacity as Director of American Repertory Ballet's Princeton Ballet School. Helping students to discover and appreciate the beauty — and discipline — of dance and to reach their potential are a major focus of her work, along with the myriad administrative and operational details of running the nation's second-largest non-profit dance school.

"Mary Pat is incredibly caring about every student and every family," notes American Repertory Ballet Executive Director Barry Hughson. "She spends enormous amounts of time meeting and talking with new families as they register their children. And really, as school director, she has the best combination of skills. She is a wonderful teacher, and understands ballet training. She also completely understands the business side."

Ms. Robertson's abilities are also admired by Graham Lustig, Artistic Director of American Repertory Ballet. "Above all, Mary Pat is a caring teacher, who always puts the students, their abilities, their talents, and their specific technical challenges first. She is a very good mentor to the students, and that atmosphere trickles down to the faculty in the way we conduct our school, which is very much in line with the heritage that Audree Estey left us."

Now celebrating 20 years as Director of Princeton Ballet School, Ms. Robertson has been involved with dance from her earliest childhood. Born and reared in Tulsa, Okla., she is the daughter of John and Mildred Ladner, and older sister to Helen and Ed.

"I remember my mom and dad were reading the paper one evening, when I was about three, and I gravely entered the living room and announced that I had made up a poem and song," recalls Ms. Robertson. "I proceeded to declaim and sing at length about the spring time, as I danced around the room. They were a little nonplussed! Then, I pleaded with them to let me start ballet lessons, and I began to study at four."

She also took piano and voice lessons, but her true passion was ballet. "I loved it! Actually, I don't have the body for a dancer. At 5'8", I'm too tall (6'2" on point), and I don't have a great deal of turn out. I really had to work hard and struggle, but I just loved it."

First Play

Mary Pat also liked school, especially French class, and was a very good student. The family took trips across the country, since her father, a judge, was from South Dakota, and her mother, a former newspaper reporter, grew up in Allentown, Pa.

She found the fun of performing early on, reports Ms. Robertson. "I remember vividly going to see a community theater production of The Merry Wives of Windsor, probably the first play I attended. I was about five at the time. I have an extremely distinct visual memory of the scene in the forest where the fairies dance. I was totally enchanted, and I can remember dancing with my shadow along the sidewalk in the warm Oklahoma night as we walked back to our car.

"We also had a family friend who made floats for a Christmas parade, and one of my most fun memories is of playing Cinderella when I was six, and riding in her coach in the parade."

Dance was always Number One, though, the focus of Mary Pat's life, and it is a rigorous master. Dedication, determination, and discipline are required from the beginning. "I started dancing at 12 with the Tulsa Civic Ballet, now the Tulsa Ballet Theater," she reports. "The corps de ballet was made up of high school kids, and outstanding professionals would be imported for the principal roles. I remember how exciting it was when they brought in Margot Fonteyn.

By the time she was in high school, Mary Pat was dancing six days a week. "We'd have class at one place, rehearse at another, and I'd get home at 10 and start my homework.

"I also remember a trip to Dallas when I was in high school. There was a memorial concert for John F. Kennedy. This was a couple of years after the assassination. It was an incredibly international performance, and included the great Italian ballerina, Carla Fracci."

BALLET BONUS: "The most exciting thing about ballet is that there are so many skills for the brain and psyche: concentration, self-discipline, delayed gratification. The sort of skills that can carry over in life." Director of Princeton Ballet School, Mary Pat Robertson is committed to helping students appreciate and participate in ballet. Latin Teacher

"I looked up to all my dance teachers, and they all influenced me," she continues. In addition, Mary Pat was strongly influenced by another teacher, Mary Hankins, her junior high school Latin teacher.

"Mary Hankins had gone to Radcliffe, and she influenced me a lot. It was not usual for someone in Tulsa to go east to college."

Mary Pat did just that, however, attending Wellesley for one year, before transferring to Stanford to be near her high school sweetheart, Michael Robertson.

"It was somewhat of a confusing time regarding dancing," she explains. "My Tulsa teachers had never pushed me to be a professional, although, of course, I had thought about it a lot. And my parents had always assumed I would go to college. But then when I was at Wellesley, a teacher from the Boston Ballet asked me what I was doing in college, and said, 'You should be dancing.'

And dance indeed proved irresistible. Though she stayed in college, taking her junior year abroad in France, ultimately graduating in French literature with honors, and had even considered going on to graduate school to teach French, Mary Pat could not leave dance behind.

"By the time I was finishing college, I had found a studio in the Bay area. They were interested in helping me to appear in their company. I would leave campus, ride my bike two miles to the railroad station, take the train for a half hour to San Matteo, then walk 20 minutes to the ballet studio, and stay three hours. Then it was all reversed and I went back to campus. I did this every day for two years."

Modern Dance

After graduation, she and her husband, whom she had married in her junior year, moved to Berkeley, where he was to earn the first of several graduate degrees in English literature. "Now, I began to think seriously about what to do, and I realized I liked modern dance, and I found a studio. We were at Berkeley for two years, and an illuminating moment came when I showed up at the studio one day, and some one said, 'What are you doing here? You were here yesterday!' This was in the early 1970s and I knew I had to get to New York."

So the Robertsons headed to Manhattan and stayed for five years. "My husband had a job at a prep school and later got a Masters at Columbia. I took classes with Martha Graham, Limon Studio, Merce Cunningham, Twyla Tharp, and also one ballet class a day — most modern dance professionals continue to take class in ballet — and one or two modern dance classes."

"Also, by 1975, there was more crossover with ballet and modern," continues Ms. Robertson. "It was more interwoven, and modern became more balletic. Ballet is the technique that trains one to become a concert dancer. The word 'concert' is important. It means on stage, not in a movie or on TV. Ballet strengthens your body and creates the appropriate look for the body."

During this time in New York, Ms. Robertson worked with several small freelance dance companies and also toured in France.

By 1980, the Robertsons decided to relocate again. "Michael liked the idea of being in a little more sequestered area, and so we came to Princeton for his doctorate work in English literature, and we loved it here."

Almost immediately, Ms. Robertson discovered Princeton Ballet School, which had been founded by the late Audree Estey in 1954. "Ms. Estey had not only founded Princeton Ballet School, but also what became a professional company, then known as Princeton Ballet," explains Ms. Robertson. "This company later became American Repertory Ballet.

Company Class

"I immediately started teaching ballet at the school, and was also given the courtesy of taking the company class (an advanced class for professional dancers). Dermot Burke was ballet master, and it was a very good class. He was an excellent teacher."

Interested in furthering dance in all areas, she also co-founded, with John Watson Stewart, "Teamwork Dance," a modern dance company, which included many members of the Princeton Ballet faculty.

"Princeton has one of the liveliest dance communities for a town of its size," points out Ms. Robertson. "We performed from 1981 to 1993. A lot of people at Teamwork had day jobs. Judy Leviton, Director of Princeton Ballet, was my mentor, and she let me use the Ballet studio, then located on Alexander Street. We would rehearse from 9:15 to 11 p.m., and I was also teaching 26 classes a week at the Ballet School. In addition, I taught dance at Rutgers and Princeton University."

Ms. Robertson is proud that Teamwork productions were greeted with praise from many publications, including Dance Magazine, which noted that she had "composed a suite of dances for herself, other professional female dancers, and two men who are eager, dedicated beginners at their craft. It's a measure of her skill and delicacy as a choreographer that Robertson has managed to construct dances for such diverse levels of skill and training, making them seem whole and sound, humane and civilized...."

Barbara Fox in US 1 commented that "Teamwork Dance has made a remarkable and important contribution to the dancing life of Princeton."

In 1983, Ms. Robertson received a Fellowship from the New Jersey State Council on the Arts for choreography, and was able to continue Teamwork productions for several more years, as well as undertake other choreographic projects. Carmina Burana for Princeton Pro Musica, and Laud to the Nativity for Voices were among them, and Ms. Robertson also choreographed numerous productions for the Opera Festival of

Wonderful Point

"I love working for opera," she notes. "It's like writing — the structure. Here's the music, the number of dances, here's the space, here's the period. It's very structured, very challenging. Among others, I worked on The Merry Widow, The Magic Flute, La Traviata,The Marriage of Figaro, and Postcard from Morocco."

"Dancers from Teamwork Dance performed with wonderful point and vitality in compact yet explosive choreography by Mary Pat Robertson," wrote James R. Oestreich in The New York Times about The Merry Widow.

The Merry Widow was my dream-come-true, when I was able to perform as a singing and dancing diva. It was wonderful," says Ms. Robertson, who had never lost her early enthusiasm for singing, and had taken voice lessons with Milton Lyon in Princeton.

She is also very pleased to be able to continue operatic productions with the New Jersey Opera Theater next summer. "I will be choreographing Romeo and Juliet and Pirates of Penzance, which will be performed at the Berlind Theater at McCarter, and I am thrilled!"

In 1986, Ms. Robertson became Director of Princeton Ballet School, with responsibilities ranging from faculty development, hiring, and payroll to teaching. "At first, it was part-time," she says, "and that was good for me since I then had a one-year-child, our daughter, Miranda.

But it soon became apparent that the position demanded full-time focus, and Ms. Robertson was clearly up to the task. During her tenure, she has initiated the PLUS program, the syllabus, the Professional Training Program, the Rider University Dance Program, and has overseen moves into the current Cranbury and Princeton locations. She has also been a consultant for the New Jersey Performing Arts Center's Outreach program.

Current Enrollment

"I do have organizational capabilities," she notes, "but it had never crossed my mind that I would become director. I do enjoy it though, and working with people is a pleasure. I do a lot of administrative work, including hiring faculty — there are now 40. I created a syllabus, which I oversee, and I teach four classes, fourth grade to early college."

With locations in Princeton, Cranbury, and New Brunswick, Princeton Ballet School has become an exciting resource for students of the dance. During her tenure, it has grown significantly, with a current enrollment of more than 1500, including 1100 children and 400 adults, with year-round classes.

And throughout the past 20 years, Ms. Robertson has built on founder Audree Estee's philosophy of dance as an empowering activity that expands students' horizons. Ms. Robertson believes that the study of ballet offers exceptional benefits to young people, even if they do not continue on to professional dance careers.

"Ballet teaches students to strive for excellence, to establish and then work to achieve a goal. Physically, ballet trains their bodies to hold correct posture and strengthen their core muscles to support proper body alignment. Ballet also develops their appreciation and understanding of music. Ultimately, our students acquire the tools of mind and body that foster self-esteem, self-discipline, and fitness that will benefit them throughout their life.

"Also," she continues, "part of what I think is special about Princeton Ballet School relates to this special community. We are so lucky to be part of an area that values education and the life of the mind, and that can appreciate fine teaching. So, when we challenge young dancers to focus harder and think harder, they enjoy rising to the occasion. This has led us, I believe, to develop a rather unusual approach to the teaching of dance, which used to focus on simple repetition of the exercises until the mere fact of the repetition improved the skill. But if one can really think about basic principles of anatomy and physics as one practices, one can see a much more rapid improvement.

"So we have a collection of teachers who focus on positive reinforcement, strong personal responsibility and thinking, which makes for a great atmosphere in which to study and work."

Different Styles

Ms. Robertson is very proud of the faculty at Princeton Ballet school, many of whom have performed professionally with companies such as New York City Ballet, American Ballet Theater, The Joffrey Ballet, and Sadler's Wells Royal Ballet, among others.

Kyra Nichols, principal dancer of New York City Ballet, joined the faculty several years ago, and balances teaching with performing. "I teach one class a week for the most advanced students. I like to pass on my knowledge to them," she explains. "I think Mary Pat is doing a wonderful job, and it's a difficult job. What I really admire about her is that she wants the students to experience all different styles and techniques. Each ballet company has its own style, different from others, and it's good for young dancers to be exposed to this. That she danced herself is a plus. She understands what everyone is going through. She is a wonderful person, and very nice to work with."

Teaching is a tremendous pleasure for Ms. Robertson, and she especially enjoys the performing aspect of classes. "When one gets to have a mature understanding of ballet classes, one can perform in a dance class. It's movement, music, and the psyche. Personally, I love the music. I love being able to move to music. All our classes have live piano music. The performance aspect is very important in my classes, which I try to make lively, enthusiastic, and humorous."

Ms. Robertson also emphasizes the importance of placing students in a class that is right for their ability. "Everyone — true beginners to advanced — is placed in the appropriate class for them."

As she plans ahead, Ms. Robertson looks forward to Princeton Ballet School's summer program, which has greatly expanded under her stewardship to include students from abroad. "This winter, when Graham Lustig and I go on our audition tours, we will conduct tours in Amsterdam, London, Rome, and Paris, in addition to sites all across the U.S. Also, many French people live in our area, and we have a lot of French students."

The "area" in which Princeton Ballet School flourishes is very pleasing to Ms. Roberts; she is a true fan of Princeton. "I love the extraordinary mix of groups of people in the town," she points out. "I have wonderful friends from the University and all over. Princeton is good for the arts, with highly educated audiences and performers. On the other hand, it's a difficult place, too, because of its location between New York and Philadelphia. I wish more people could realize how much Princeton has to offer in the arts. For example, American Repertory Ballet is a fine professional company in New Brunswick, with an extraordinary group of professional dancers, who perform in New Brunswick and at McCarter, as well as in New York.

Creative Inspiration

"And we have such exceptional teachers at our school. I love watching my friend and colleague Kyra Nichols, who continues to teach a class here. I am truly inspired by all of my colleagues and their dedication."

When not teaching, overseeing the school, or dancing (she continues to take class twice a week), Ms. Robertson likes to sing, and joins the Princeton Musical Amateurs once a month. "We sight-read scores of classical music, and I look forward to this so much. Sometimes, I'll get creative inspiration from it that I can put toward my choreography."

Ms. Robertson is also a devoted gardener, an enthusiastic cook, and an avid reader. She and her husband, who is professor of English literature at the College of New Jersey, belong to a reading group which also meets once a month.

Travel is another pleasure, especially to France, which she visits as often as possible. "In fact, we will be going to Paris soon to see our daughter who is spending her junior year from Vassar there."

Reflecting on the importance of Princeton Ballet School's presence in the cultural life of Princeton, Ms. Robertson is justly proud of the school's progress, often in the face of challenges. "In a very difficult arts climate in the United States, we have managed to keep this wonderful organization going. I feel strongly about the honor of continuing Audree Estey's goal of offering classes to all who want to come. They don't have to audition. We are thrilled to have everyone."

While she is proud of the recognition her own work has received, including being honored by the Arts Council of Princeton as "one of Princeton's most esteemed artists", she is especially proud to see the success of Princeton Ballet school alumni.

"Watching my former student Tim Acito dance with MOMIX at City Center, then returning a few days later to see a solo evening by Baryshnikov, also at City Center, with one of the choreographers, another of our alums, Kraig Patterson, was exciting. Seeing another alumna, Erin Mahoney listed by the Washington Post as their top 'pick' for exciting dance debut in a new role in 2005 was a thrill.

"And, you know, every time I see a student 'get' something, and their face lights up! That's what it's all about."

PU Football Edges Colgate in OT Thriller, Ready for Friday Night Lights With Brown

For the Princeton University football team, recent trips to Colgate have proven to be fruitless journeys.

The Tigers haven't won at Andy Kerr Stadium since 1997, having lost five of the last six games overall in the series with the perennial Patriot League power.

Last Saturday, Princeton looked like it was following the same script as it fell behind the home-standing Raiders 7-0 in the first quarter.

Tiger head coach Roger Hughes experienced an unpleasant feeling of deja vu as his team struggled early in the game.

"We haven't had a lot of success up there, they really have a home-field advantage," said Hughes. "They feel like they are up by 10 points before they even start; they play with a lot of emotion there. We came out flat and fell behind."

But with Princeton bringing an undefeated record into the contest and having shown a knack for making clutch plays, the Tigers wrote a stirring new chapter in the rivalry as they pulled out a thrilling 27-26 overtime win before a crowd of 4,220.

For Hughes, the win was further testament to the grit his club has displayed in a special fall that has seen the Tigers climb into the Top-25 in the Division 1-AA polls.

"The kids could've folded but they didn't," said Hughes, who has Princeton at 4-0 for the first time in his seven seasons guiding the program. "I'm really proud of how they rallied."

The Tiger rally started in the second quarter when the Princeton offense went into its no-huddle offense to change the tempo of the game. R.C. Lagomarsino ripped off a 33 yard run to get Princeton into Colgate territory. PU quarterback Jeff Terrell then hit Rob Torseco for a 14-yard gain. Going for the jugular, Terrell then hooked up with Brendan Circle for a 33-yard scoring strike as Princeton knotted the game at 7-7 with 11:33 left in the half.

Keeping up the pressure, Princeton scored on its next possession with a 33-yard field goal by Conner Louden culminating a 5-play, 51-yard scoring march.

Colgate, though, answered with a long drive of its own. Sparked by hard running from star sophomore Jordan Scott, who gained 48 yards on the possession, the Raiders regained the lead as quarterback Mike Saraceno plunged in two yards for a touchdown to cap the 77-yard march. In a play that would loom large, a big rush from Princeton special teams ace Bill Foran helped thwart Colgate kicker Jacob Stein as he missed the extra point attempt, leaving the Raiders ahead 13-10 at the half.

Late in the third quarter, the Tigers regained the lead. Taking over at its 49, Princeton moved down the field as Terrell used his legs and arm to get the offense rolling. The senior quarterback ran twice for nine yards to get Princeton into Colgate territory. After Rob Toresco made a two-yard run on a fourth and one, Terrell hit Brian Brigham for an 18 yard gain. Pete Ploszek burst 21 yards on a draw to get the Tigers to the one. Toresco bulled in from there for the touchdown and Louden converted the extra point to give Princeton a 17-13 lead.

But showing why it rarely ever loses at home, Colgate went to the air as it got back into the lead. With the ball at the Princeton 42, Saraceno fired to Anthony Pumilio for a 41-yard gain. Two plays later Saraceno ran in for the score as the Raiders took a 20-17 lead with 6:20 left in regulation.

Taking over at its 35, Princeton again was sparked by big plays from Terrell. The lefty found Circle for a 20-yard pass play that got Princeton into Colgate territory. After running for nine yards, Terrell hit Brian Shields on an 18-yard pass play that moved the Tigers to the Raider 19.

ROAD WARRIOR: Princeton University senior quarterback Jeff Terrell looks for an opening in Princeton's recent win at Columbia. Last Saturday, Terrell passed for a career-high 293 yards to help lead the Tigers to a thrilling 27-26 win at Colgate. The victory was Princeton's sixth straight road win, the longest such streak for the program since the 1964-65 seasons when legendary coach Dick Colman's teams won seven straight away games. (Photo by Bill Allen/NJ SportAction)

LONG-ARM JURISOICTION: Princeton University senior defensive lineman Jake Marshall pressures Columbia quarterback Chris Hormann in the Tigers' win at Columbia earlier this season. Last Saturday, Marshall and his mates on defense turned in another superb effort as they came up with several key stops in Princeton's 27-26 overtime win at Columbia. Princeton, now 4-0 overall and 1-0 in Ivy League play, hosts Brown (1-3, 0-1 Ivy), under the lights this Friday.

The drive stalled and Louden came on to kick a clutch 34-yard field goal to knot the topsy-turvy contest at 20-20 with 4:02 to go in the fourth.

The Tiger defense then needed to make the big plays after a big kickoff return and a 15-yard penalty gave Colgate possession at the Princeton 45. Colgate made one first down but then the Tiger defense stiffened as it stopped Scott for losses on two straight plays and Tiger linebacker Brig Walker wrapped up a Colgate receiver in bounds in the waning seconds. A rushed Colgate field goal attempt went awry and the game went into overtime.

Princeton had possession first and gained nine yards to the Colgate 16 where it faced a fourth and one situation. Hughes was leaning toward going for a field goal until Terrell got the coach to change his mind.

"At first I thought it was one and one-half yards and I called for the field goal," recalled Hughes. "Jeff came over and said it was just inches. We decided to take a timeout and they had a lot of confidence that they could make it. Jeff made the play and then got the touchdown."

Terrell's four-yard run and Louden's extra point gave Princeton a 27-20 advantage but there was still plenty of drama remaining in the game. After getting stuffed for a loss, Scott got open on a swing pass and raced 26 yards for a touchdown. Colgate then decided to go for an all-or-nothing two-point conversion. Saraceno tried to scamper into the end zone on a quarterback draw but he was corralled for a loss which gave Princeton the hard-earned victory.

"I was surprised by it," said Hughes, reflecting on Colgate's decision to opt for the two-point attempt. "I was preparing the offense for the second overtime. We felt the quarterback draw was the likely play and the guys all stayed at home. Tom made a big play."

It was the latest in a series of clutch plays from Princeton's bend-but-not-break defense. "We gave up some long plays, some big runs and passes," said Hughes, who got a sparkling 12-tackle performance from senior linebacker Tim Boardman as the defense held Colgate to just 3-of-13 third down conversions.

"But the defense made the big plays; up to this point the defense has made the big plays when we have needed them. There were a lot of quarterback hurries and pressure, Boardman had a huge game; probably his best ever."

Princeton also got a big game from quarterback Terrell, who recovered from a shaky effort against Columbia to hit on 17-of-32 passes last Saturday for a career-high 293 yards.

"I thought Jeff was much sharper this week," said Hughes, who also got a career game from receiver Circle, who had a personal best 116 yards on four catches. "He had no interceptions and he read his progressions really well."

While Princeton may not have been at its sharpest as it lost two fumbles and surrendered some big plays, Hughes didn't mind the drama since his team came out on the right side of things.

"We certainly made it exciting," said Hughes with a laugh. "It's a four and a half hour ride but it seemed shorter."

Now, Princeton, which is 1-0 in Ivy League play, hopes to start its ride to an Ivy title as it hosts a rare Friday night game against defending league champion Brown (1-3, 0-1 Ivy) in a game which will be televised by ESPNU.

"The atmosphere couldn't be better; we hope the place will be rocking," said Hughes, who has guided the Tigers to six straight road wins, the longest such streak for Princeton since the 1964-65 seasons when legendary coach Dick Colman's teams won seven straight away games.

"Brown may not have a good a record as they had hoped but they still have a lot of weapons. DiGiacomo is a good quarterback and that Lonnie Hill is a great receiver. We have our work cut out out for us."

But with the way Princeton has been taking care of business so far this fall, it appears ready to shine in prime time.

Tiger Men's Soccer Squanders Chances In One-Goal Losses to Brown, St. John's

Entering last Wednesday night's contest against visiting St. John's, the Princeton University men's soccer team appeared to have turned the corner.

Combining stingy defense with opportunistic finishing, the Tigers brought a two-game winning streak into the evening, having improved to 5-3-2 after edging Dartmouth and Bucknell by identical 1-0 margins.

With Princeton and St. John's stalemated at 0-0 in the first half, a lightning storm lit up the night sky, delaying the game for nearly an hour. After play resumed, lightning struck for the Red Storm as they curled a free kick into the net with 2:53 remaining in regulation to pull out a 1-0 victory.

Three nights later against visiting Brown, it was Princeton that struck early as Robbie Morgenroth blasted in a goal in the sixth minute to give the Tigers an early 1-0 lead over the 21st-ranked Bears. But once again, the Tigers faltered down the stretch as Brown scored with 9:40 to play in regulation and then took the contest on an overtime tally.

With his team now at 5-5-2 and 1-2 in Ivy League play, Princeton head coach Jim Barlow admitted that his team is in a quandary. "There is a feeling of frustration right now," said Barlow. "We've had opportunities but we've let them slip away; it's frustrating to know that you're right there."

In the loss to St. John's, the Tigers were done in by an uneven performance. "We just had a great effort against Dartmouth but we weren't as consistent in the St. John's game," said Barlow.

"I don't think we played as well as we needed to against a team like St. John's. We didn't do as good a job keeping our shape defensively. We did have a couple of really good opportunities offensively."

Against Brown, the Tigers seemed to be in good shape after going ahead on the Morgenroth strike, the first goal of his career. "That was a great goal by Robbie; he just stepped in front of them and banged it in," said Barlow. "We played with commitment Saturday night; we had a lot of energy."

But in the end, that energy wasn't enough to produce victory. "Brown is a good team; they have been playing really well," said Barlow, whose team was even in shots at eight against high-flying Brown (8-1-1 overall, 2-0-1 Ivy). "The game swung on one or two plays but when you're leading with 10 minutes left, you should win the game."

If Princeton is to get back on the winning track, it will need to start doing better in the second half. "I think we need to find a better mentality at the end of the games," asserted Barlow, whose team was slated to host Seton Hall on October 10 before playing at Columbia on October 14.

"When other teams come at us we need to weather things better. We also need to respond by going forward on attack. It's a combination of both things."

With Princeton tied with Yale for fifth in the Ivy standings, trailing front-runners Penn (3-0 Ivy) and Brown, Barlow isn't standing pat when it comes to his lineup.

"We had four freshman in the starting lineup against Brown [Max Hare, Danny Steiner, Devin Muntz, and Ben Harms] along with two or three sophomores so we're a young team," said Barlow, who has also been working sophomore Joe Walter into the goalkeeper rotation along with senior Justin Oppenheimer. "We are constantly looking at what combination of players gives us the best chance of winning."

Kontos and the Tigers were unable to hold the tort last Saturday as Brown battled back trom a 1-0 deficit to top Princeton 2-1 in overtimo. The Tigers will look to keep in the Ivy League race when they play at Columbia on October 14. PU Women's Cross Country on the Rise As Swenson, Freshmen Have Set the Pace

As the Princeton University women's cross country team went through its preseason training, head coach Peter Farrell got a sinking feeling.

Farrell, the only head coach the program has ever had in its 28-year history, realized that his two top returning runners, senior captain Catha Mullen and sophomore standout Jolee VanLeuven, weren't going to be helping the team anytime soon.

"Jolee was not medically cleared and Catha had an injury over the summer and hadn't been able to do a full training load," said Farrell. "To look at what happened to my two top runners was a big blow to me. I had to go to the deck and pull out some other cards."

Farrell has found some aces as the Tigers have far exceeded his expectations, producing a sizzling start that has seen the team win its first three races and rise to No. 7 in the national rankings.

The wild cards for Princeton have been its quartet of freshman standouts — Liz Costello, Christy Johnson, Alexa Glencer, and Reilly Kiernan.

The freshmen had been superb from the start as Glencer placed second in the season-opening Princeton Invitational with Costello and Johnson taking sixth and eighth, respectively.

"I don't like to rely on freshmen but this class has adjusted and acclimated itself to college in a big way," asserted Farrell. "They've made their presence felt. Their approach to competition is so composed; they act as if nothing fazes them."

Another key factor for the Tigers has been the way senior Mia Swenson has stepped up in her final campaign with the program.

"Mia did well at the H-Y-P meet, she shadowed the winner (Yale's Lindsay Donaldson) almost the whole way," said Farrell of the Hamilton, Mass. native whose second-place finish paced a dominating effort which saw the Tigers take spots two through eight. "She put in a huge summer of training and she is starting to reap the benefits. She is leading the freshmen around the course."

Swenson led the way again, finishing fourth overall as Princeton won the Paul Short Run at Lehigh University in its last meet, topping two nationally-ranked teams, Wisconsin and Tennessee, on the way to the win.

"Mia had a great performance at the Paul Short meet," said Farrell, whose squad edged Wisconsin by a point in the team standings.

"It was a tremendous performance by the whole team. We asked them to start conservatively and gradually move up; they really followed that game plan. It was ali creamsicle (Tennessee) and raspberry (Wisconsin) at the first mile. At the second mile they were still locked in. I think each of our girls passed five runners over the last mile and three-quarters."

The program's new course at the West Windsor fields has helped the team move into the elite of the college cross country scene.

"It's a great place to train," said Farrell. "Now we train unfettered; we're not running through people. This is our place to train; it's not owned by somebody else. The team can run on grass and rolling hills, less chance of getting a sprained ankle."

This weekend at the Pre-Nationals Invitational meet at Indiana State, the Tigers will try to prove that their national ranking is justified.

"The polls are the polls; people tend to inflate things," said Farrell. "It's nice to be in the Top 10. The freshmen have shown absolute class but this meet is very intimidating. Everybody comes to Terre Haute; it's big time."

Based on how Princeton has excelled so far this season, they should fit right in with the big time competition out in Indiana.

Princeton Alum Young Stars in MLB Playoffs

Former Princeton University baseball star Chris Young came up big in the most important game of his Major League baseball career as he pitched the San Diego Padres to a 3-1 win over the St. Louis Cardinals last Saturday in Game Three of the National League Divisional Series

The 6'10 Young, who also starred in basketball at Princeton, went 6⅔ inning in getting the victory. He allowed just four hits while striking out nine, incluading Albert Pujols and Scott Rolen twice each. The National League's best road starter, going 6-0 with a 2.41 ERA. Young kept that going into the post-season. He is 9-0 in 24 road outings dating to June 25, 2005.

The last Ivy pitcher to win in the post-season was Yale graduate Ron Darling, who threw seven shutout innings for the New York Mets against the Red Sox to get the victory in Game Four of the 1986 World Series.

Young will have to wait until next year to get another playoff win as the Padres were eliminated by the Cardinals on Sunday.

Tiger Field Hockey Falls to UConn 2-0

Unable get its offense untracked, the Princeton University field hockey team fell 2-0 at 10th-ranked Connecticut last Saturday.

Princeton was outshot 19-6 as it dropped to 6-4 on the season. The Tigers, who currently lead the Ivy League with a 4-0 league record, host Brown on October 14 and Hofstra on October 15.

PU Freshman Saiontz Takes Tennis Crown

Princeton University freshman tennis star Melissa Saiontz produced another highlight in her strong debut season as she won the "A" flight singles championship as the USTA Women's Collegiate Invitational last weekend at the Billie Jean King National Tennis Center.

Saiontz, a Miami, Fla. native, bested South Carolina's Ana Marija Zubori in straight sets in the final match. She is the first Princeton player to win an "A" flight singles bracket since Kavitha Krishnamuthy won three events in the fall of 1999.

PU Women's Volleyball Has Mixed Weekend

It was a mixed weekend for the Princeton University women's volleyball team as it tasted defeat for the first time this season but then rebounded with a win over an archrival.

On Friday, the Tigers fell 3-0 at Dartmouth (30-27, 30-27, 30-27) despite big performances from Lindsay Ensign and Bailey Robinson. Ensign had 18 kills in a losing cause while Robinson chipped in 39 assists.

A night later, the Tigers rebounded with a solid 3-0 win at Harvard (30-24, 30-23, 30-23). Ensign had another big night as she killed 34 balls. Parker Henritze also starred as she piled up 19 kills and 12 digs.

The Tigers, now 12-1 overall and 2-1 in Ivy League play, will aim to stay on the winning track as they host Cornell on October 13 and Columbia on October 14.

Sparked By Borchert's Heart, Versatility, PHS Football Tops HoVal for First Victory

Things didn't start too well this season for Princeton High junior football player Doug Borchert.

The linebacker/running back suffered a knee injury in the preseason and was sidelined for PHS' season opener against Steinert.

Borchert chafed on the bench as the Little Tigers started their season on a down note, falling to Steinert 20-0.

The 6'1, 190-pound Borchert returned to action a week later but has been frustrated as PHS kept losing, falling to 0-4 and getting outscored a total of 94-27 in their last three outings.

Last Saturday, Borchert was determined to get fall going in the right direction as PHS played at winless Hopewell Valley.

Starring on both sides of the ball with 45 yards rushing and a touchdown to go with several big hits at linebacker, Borchert helped spark PHS to a 24-9 win over the Bulldogs.

A grinning Borchert savored the total team effort PHS produced in finally making it into the winning column this fall.

"It's about time," said Borchert. "We haven't been able to put together four quarters yet and we did that today. The offensive line played really well; there was good blocking, good running, and good defense."

Borchert was at his best early in the third quarter as PHS looked to extend its 17-7 halftime lead. After HoVal recovered the opening kickoff of the second half to start possession at the PHS 22, Borchert came on a blitz and forced a fumble that was recovered by teammate Peter Murphy.

Assuming his running back role, Borchert gained some tough yardage inside the red zone after a 55-yard scamper by Alexz Henriques had put PHS deep in Bulldog territory. The drive ended with Borchert rumbling in from the four for a touchdown as PHS built its cushion to 24-7.

For Borchert, making it into the end zone was the icing on the cake. "I didn't get in much on offense last year," said Borchert who also played some tight end last Saturday. "Whenever I do get in on offense I just try to help out as much as I can. It's always good to get a score."

For Borchert, just being back on the field is something to savor. "It was hard to sit out because I saw my team struggling," recalled Borchert. "I tried to keep them motivated from the sidelines. It feels really good to be back; I'm 100 percent."

PHS head coach Steve Everette is thrilled to have Borchert back in the lineup. "I'll tell you what, in that first game against Steinert I missed him so much," said Everette.

"When he came back the next week, on the very first play he is in he causes a fumble. He's the heart and soul of this team and that kind of spread out over the entire team. Even as a junior, he's one of our leaders. It's nice having him back and having him healthy to make plays."

PHS' biggest playmaker in the win over HoVal was the elusive senior running back Henriques, who darted for 228 yards rushing and two touchdowns.

His most spectacular play came in the second quarter when he took a kickoff and raced down the sideline for an 85-yard touchdown.

"Two years ago, the kid had his coming out party here; we knew he was going to be a special player then," said Everette.

"The first week of the season was rough for him but I think every week since then he has put up 100 yards. He just does a great job of seeing the holes and cutting back. He's a special, special football player and I take no credit for what he does."

PHS got a special effort from its developing offensive line. "This was probably their best effort," said Everette referring to his O-line.

"We have two sophomores starting (Tom Hines and Joe Giacalone). They are just two kids who love to compete. We've thrown them to the wolves; last week they both started against Notre Dame. They've seen the biggest of the big and for them it will get better week by week."

Everette is hoping his team collectively will make similar progress. "We have this five-week stretch on the road," said Everette, whose team plays at 2-3 Ewing this Friday night.

"We've dubbed it the 'trail of tears,' hopefully we won't be the ones with the tears, we're hoping to deal out some losses. We're just working on getting better every week; we don't like being 1-4."

Borchert, for his part, is going to get them ready for the challenges ahead. "I try to get them motivated; I try to get them pumped up every day before the games and every practice," asserted Borchert. "We can't come out flat; we can't score 50 points so we need to come out strong every quarter."

BREAKING THROUGH: Princeton High senior running back Alexz Henriques eludes two tacklers in recent action. Last Saturday, Henriques rushed for 228 yards and a touchdown and also returned a kickoff 85 yards for a score as PHS topped Hopewell Valley 24-9 to get into the win column for the first time this fall. The Little Tigers, now 1-4, will look to keep on the winning track when they play at Ewing this Friday night. (Photo by Bill Allen/NJ SportAction)

Johnson Develops Finesse to Go With Speed, Emerging as a Star for Stuart Field Hockey

Carys Johnson brought sprinter's speed to the Stuart Country Day field hockey team last fall when she made the varsity squad.

In the spring of 2005, Johnson had raced to the title in the 100-meter dash at the state Prep B championship track meet.

Johnson, though, was not an instant success with the Stuart field hockey team, spending a lot of time on the bench as she mastered the finer points of the game.

This season, Johnson's stick skills have caught up with her pace as she earned a spot in the Stuart starting lineup and has been making her way on to the scorer's sheet.

Last Wednesday, Johnson showed how far she has come, scoring three goals to help spark Stuart's 5-0 romp at Hun on the field turf at the Natale Family Field.

In reflecting on the win, Johnson attributed the margin of the victory to Stuart's team speed. "I think we're a really strong turf team," said Johnson, who scored once in the first half and then added two more goals in the second half as Stuart improved to 9-0-1.

"We have a lot of good runners and it's really a pleasure for all of us. It's the middle of the season and we're really in good shape. This is one of our best games so far. We keep getting better every time we get on the field."

Johnson feels as though she getting better and better. "Last year I made varsity as a sophomore and I didn't get a lot of playing time," said Johnson, who was first in both the 100 and 200 at the 2006 Prep B track meet.

"This year I'm playing more, I'm getting more used to passing with Jackie and Kelly and Eleanor. I'm getting used to it, slowly and surely."

"I've learned a lot from track; it helps to keep me fit aerobically," explained Johnson. "It also puts things in perspective; they aren't as fast on the field as they are on the track. Track and field is more individual."

Stuart head coach Missy Bruvik is pleased with the individual improvement she has seen in Johnson. "She's just getting better and better," said Bruvik, referring to her junior star.

"She keeps the ball alive. She has good momentum whether she's going down the sidelines or she is in the circle. She's a track kid and it's great to see her carry the ball with that kind of control."

Stuart certainly controlled things offensively in its win over Hun, outshooting the Raiders 35-1. "In the first half, we definitely put the pressure on," said Bruvik, who also got goals from Kelly Bruvik and Amy Sismondo.

"We got the shots off; we applied enough pressure for the rebounds. Going into the second half, we talked about following your own ball. I thought in the second half we finished. We were in good position, finishing on the post."

The Stuart defense, led by Liz Colicchio and Janae Harrington, was a wall in the Hun game, repelling just about every Raider advance up the field.

"They do a good job," said Bruvik in assessing her team's stingy defense. "Janae is calm under pressure; she cleans it wide with power. I know the goalies are happy to have Janae in front of them."

Bruvik thinks her team has some good things in front of it as it looks forward to defending its Mercer County Tournament title and competing in the state Prep tourney.

"I think they want to continue to play at this level and play the game as it comes," said Bruvik, whose team plays at Pingry on October 11 before hosting Princeton High on October 13. "If they play with this kind of intensity and effort, I'll be thrilled regardless of what happens."

Johnson, for her part, thinks Stuart can reach a higher level. "I think we just bond on and off the field," said Johnson.

"When you play together from the beginning of August to hopefully the first Sunday in November, there is just something that happens, that clicks. We have some tough games coming up but if we keep getting better, there will be no stopping us."

And with Johnson getting better and better, Stuart looks like it will be awfully tough to stop.

SMASH HIT: Stuart Country Day senior defender Liz Colicchio fires away in recent action. Colicchio's superb play on the back line has helped Stuart get off to a 9-0-1 start this season. The Tartans will look to keep on the winning track when they play at Pingry on October 11 and host Princeton High on October 13.

MINING FOR GOALS: Hun School senior star Andrew Mino, right, puts the heat on an opposing goalie in recent action. Last Saturday, Mino and his teammates found the back of the net three times as they rallied from a 2-0 deficit to edge Lawrenceville 3-2 in overtime. Hun Field Hockey Slumps to 3-5-2, Needs to Come Together as a Team

Although it was under fire, the Hun School field hockey team was hanging in there last Wednesday in its battle with undefeated Stuart Country Day.

With Hun goalie Sarah Dileo stopping shot after shot, the Raiders trailed just 1-0 at the half despite not having the ball in the Stuart defensive end for more than a few moments in the first 30 minutes.

In the second half, though, Hun wilted under the Stuart barrage as the Tartans found the back of the cage four times on the way to a 5-0 win.

In assessing the setback, Hun head coach Kathy Quirk acknowledged that her team lost its nerve.

"I thought that it would be a much closer game," said Quirk quietly on a day when her team was outshot by a 35-1 margin. "We let them march down the field on us on their first two second half goals. We started saying we were down and there was no way we were coming back."

Quirk was hoping that her team's second half collapse would provoke some soul searching. I told them that the loss was not one person's fault," said Quirk.

"We just didn't play together as a team. Someone was yelling at somebody and someone was telling somebody else instead of letting me do that. There was tension."

The Raiders showed a lot more fight in their next two outings as they lost 1-0 to WW/P-S last Thursday and then battled undefeated Lawrenceville hard two days taking a 1-0 lead at half before succumbing 2-1.

Hun has gotten plenty of fight from its midfield through thick and thin. "Fran [Morales], Tyler [Willey], and Dana [Aidekman] have all been giving me 100 percent," said Quirk, whose team moved to 3-5-2 with a 1-1 tie last Monday against Lawrence. "There seems to be a gap between my midfield and my forward line."

There was no hole in Dileo's effort against Stuart. "She did a nice job," said Quirk of her scrappy senior who ended the day with 30 saves. "She had some great saves and I think we fed off of that. The defense was doing its job."

If the team is going to start doing its job collectively, Hun is going to have to show some togetherness and composure.

"It's not going to get any easier," said Quirk, whose team plays at WW/P-N on October 12, at Blair on October 14, and at Hightstown on October 16.

"I was just saying in there that we have to build some trust. The things we did wrong today are things that we practiced. We lost it in the game; you can't do it."

SAVING GRACE: Hun School senior goalie Sarah Dileo patrols the cage area in a recent contest. Last Monday, Dileo recorded seven saves as Hun battled to a 1-1 tie with Lawrence. The Raiders, now 3-5-2, play at WW/P-N on October 12, at Blair on October 14, and at Hightstown on October 16.

With Emphasis on Unselfish Play, Hun Boys' Soccer Starts at 7-0-1

There is no go-to guy on the Hun School boys' soccer team and that suits everybody just fine.

Spreading the wealth offensively, Hun has gotten off to a sizzling 7-0-1 start.

Last week, the well-drilled Raiders displayed their balance as they routed Pennington 9-1 with seven different players finding the back of the net as Andrew Mino and Jelani Rooks each scored two goals with Matt Florio, Mike Williams, Mike Azzara, David Willey, and Steven Giannacio chipping in one apiece

Hun senior forward Mino said the team was particularly sharp in the win over Pennington. "We moved the ball around; we worked the ball as a team," asserted Mino. "We spread the ball around pretty well; we move it well in the back and then we pushed it up from there."

The unselfish play comes naturally to Hun. "Everybody works hard and tries to get everybody goals," said Mino.

"We don't compete for goals; we try to get everybody goals. The forwards run around and try to make the defense compensate."

Hun's defensive approach also emphasizes unselfish play. "Our defense is strong; the defense always works hard no matter what," asserted Mino.

Hun head coach Chris Kingston smiled as he assessed his team's effort against Pennington. "We played well, we got it going early," said Kingston, whose club played well again last Saturday as it rallied to edge archrival Lawrenceville 3-2 in overtime with goals from Williams, Willey, and Giannacio. "We moved the ball well. There is not much else to say, we were pretty sharp."

The team's sharpness has been fuelled in large part by the team's core of seniors, led by Mino and Williams. "The seniors have been around a few years now; they are competitive," said Kingston.

"Mino works his butt off; he just doesn't stop running. That rubs off on the other guys. Mike has been playing pretty well. He plays on a good club team and he broke through last week with a goal. I think the goals will start coming a little more for him."

The Hun defense has been superb, giving up just 3 goals in seven games since a 3-3 opening day tie with WW/P-S.

"We don't give up a lot of good opportunities," said Kingston, whose goalie David Putman injured his shoulder against Pennington but was back in the net against Lawrenceville. "The guys are pretty confident in David; they play more confidently when he is on the field and that contributes to the defense."

Noting that his team has fought through injuries to such players as senior star Matt Sanford, Kingston sees toughness all over the field.

"Our schedule is going to get a lot tougher," said Kingston, whose team plays at perennial Prep A champ St. Benedict's on October 11 and at Blair on October 14. "There are a lot of tough guys on this team. I think they need to get tougher but we've been showing some resiliency."

Mino, for his part, sees mental toughness as a calling card of the undefeated Raiders. "We worked hard in preseason; we worked really rigorously to get tougher," said Mino. "We fight through everything; we do it as a team. We do get mentally tough; that's one of our strengths."

Crouse's Intensity in Midfield a Big Spark As PDS Field Hockey Girds for Final Push

BRINGING HER A-GAME: Princeton Day School senior midfielder Allie Crouse controls the ball in a game earlier this fall. Last Friday, Crouse chipped in an assist to help PDS top Robbinsville 2-0. (Photo by Bill Allen/NJ SportAction)

Allie Crouse and her teammates on the Princeton Day School field hockey team were stung by their loss last Wednesday at Lawrenceville.

While there was no shame in losing to the undefeated Big Red, Crouse was disappointed by the lack of intensity PDS showed in absorbing the 2-0 setback.

"We didn't come to play; we didn't play our best," lamented Crouse, a senior midfielder. "I thought we were prepared but when it came down to it we weren't. Usually we give them a good fight."

As she hit the field for PDS' game last Friday against visiting Robbinsville, Crouse was ready to expend every last ounce of energy at her disposal.

Buzzing around the midfield, Crouse both disrupted the Robbinsville offense and triggered the Panther attack, sparking PDS to a 2-0 win over the Ravens as it improved to 8-2.

The highlight of Crouse's day came in the waning moments of the first half when she directed the ball to her twin sister, Nina, who promptly banged the ball into the back of the cage for the Panthers' second goal.

In reflecting on the win, Crouse said the defeat to Lawrenceville helped spur the Panthers to a stellar effort.

"I definitely wanted to come with my 'A-game' today," asserted Crouse, one of PDS' tri-captains along with her sister and their classmate Katie Briody.

"I do everyday but especially today after the Lawrenceville game. I wanted to step up and show this team right from the start that we came to win. We put it all out there from the first second of the game to the last second."

For Crouse, hooking up with her sister for the game's final goal was particularly sweet. "We did that play where it goes on a sweep to me and then I hit opposite," explained Crouse. "She's usually there and usually hits it really well."

Crouse acknowledges that she has a special connection on the field with her sister. "I play well with Katie Briody, she knows where I'm going to go just from talking," added Crouse. "But Nina knows where to be even when I don't tell her. We don't play on the same side of the field but when she crosses it I'll be there, when I cross it, she'll be there."

Getting moved to the midfield away from her sister on attack has helped the Panthers get off to their strong start. "I've started playing midfield this year and I don't mind it," said Crouse. "Nina is more offense-minded and I feel like I'm more defensive so it works out pretty well."

PDS head coach Jill Thomas thought things worked out pretty well for her club as it bounced back from the Lawrenceville defeat.

"The feeling I had today is that I wouldn't want to be playing us today," said Thomas. "It's OK to lose to somebody who is better; clearly they were the better team that day but we didn't show up and that's a big disappointment. Today it was just 'let's go play.' We wanted to be in the game from the start to finish and whatever happens, happens."

Thomas expects an all-out 60-minute effort from her star midfielder Crouse. "Her move to midfield has been key for us," maintained Thomas, whose team plays at Blair on October 11 and at Newton High on October 14 before hosting Bordentown on October 16.

"She's key on our corner, she's up there. She's getting the whole idea. Today she just played all over; that's what a mid does. If we get more play like that, we won't have any problems competing."

With her team off to an 8-2 start, Thomas believes her team can compete with anyone in the upcoming Mercer County Tournament (MCT) and state Prep tourney

"I like where we are at," said Thomas, whose club advanced to the semis in both the MCT and Preps last year.

"Last year we climbed the mountain, we fought for everything we got. This year we have a little more control; we're working on the mental part of it."

Thomas is depending on her senior tri-captains to help the team get into the zone. "They are leaders," said Thomas, referring to the Crouses and Briody.

"Katie is more vocal; that's her leadership style. Allie and Nina are the same everyday; they set the tone with the way they play. Everyone has to pick it up to play with them. I think we're seeing that; we're getting great stuff from players like Emily Burns and Lindsey Mischner."

Crouse is hoping the Panthers can take things one step further than the PDS lacrosse team which advanced to the state Prep A title game this past spring.

"For the lacrosse team, making it to the championship game was the best thing," said Crouse, who also stars on the PDS lax team.

"We have been talking about it from day one; that is our goal. Why not? If you have fun winning you might as well go for the top. As Coach Thomas says play every game like it's your last and it won't be."

With Crouse's intensity sparking PDS from the midfield, PDS figures to have a lengthy post-season run.

—Bill Alden

ON THE REBOUND: Princeton Day School senior star Katie Briody winds up for a shot in recent action. After suffering a tough 2-0 loss to Lawrenceville last Wednesday, Briody and the Panthers rebounded with a 2-0 win over Robbinsville on Friday. PDS, now 8-2, plays at Blair on October 11 and at Newton High on October 14 before hosting Bordentown on October 16.

Do Not Be Afraid to Seek Workers' Compensation Benefits

If you've suffered a work-related medical condition over time, but were afraid to report it for fear that your employer would penalize you or terminate your employment, please read this.

Things Every Employee Should Know About Workers' Compensation

1.) In New Jersey, an employer CANNOT retaliate against an injured employee for seeking Workers' Compensation benefits. By a law known as the New Jersey Workers' Compensation Act, you have the right to report your injury to your employer and seek benefits. There are thousands of Workers' Compensation claims filed every year.

An employer that penalizes or terminates an employee for exercising his or her rights under the law exposes itself to civil and criminal penalties, including fines and possible imprisonment. In addition, the law mandates that an employee who is terminated because of having sought Workers' Compensation benefits is to have his or her employment restored and is to receive all of the back pay to which he or she would otherwise have been entitled upon restoration to employment.

As a practical matter, we have found that employers virtually never terminate or punish in any way an employee who sought Workers' Compensation benefits for a job-related injury. Employers know such action is illegal and understand that they will be penalized in the most severe way if they attempt to do so.

2) All New Jersey emptoyers are required to make Workers' Compensation benefits available to employees.

An employer's failure to make Workers' Compensation benefits available can result in severe penalties.

3) Workers' Compensation benefits are paid by the employer's insurance company, not the employer itself.

Your employer will not be paying for your benefits out of its pocket when you file a Workers' Compensation claim. Benefits are paid by the insurance company which provides Workers' Compensation coverage to the employer.

4) Consult an Attorney

When you have been injured on the job, it is essential that you protect your rights.

Your first step is to speak with an attorney who will help you understand your Workers' Compensation entitlements. Those entitlements include lost wage replacement benefits if you are unable to work because of your injury. You are also entitled to medical treatment, paid by your employer's insurance company. And, you can receive permanent disability benefits for the pain and loss of functioning you have suffered. Your meeting with the attorney is strictly confidential.

The attorney cannot charge you a fee for the consultation or for any work that is done on your behalf in your case. The Judge of Compensation will assess a counsel fee at the end of the case that amounts to no more than 20% of the award you receive. In addition, in most cases, the employer's insurance company will pay most of the fee.

5.) Don't let fear silence you.

You should understand that if you do not protect yourself by consulting an attorney after you have been injured on the job, you risk losing your legal rights.

SNAP JUDGMENT: Hun School quarterback Shane Davis waits for the snap from center Tyler Stockton in a game earlier this season. HUN

Girls' Soccer: A Lindsey Scott goal was not enough as Hun fell 2-1 to visiting Hightstown. The Raiders outshot the Rams 10-5 but didn't capitalize enough on their chances as they fell to 4-2-2 on the season. Hun hosts Little Flower Catholic High on October 11 before playing at Blair on October 14 and at Lawrenceville on October 17.

Girls' Tennis: Hun topped Princeton Day School 4-1 last Monday to improve to 3-1 on the season. In upcoming action, the Raiders have a match at WW/P-N on October 11, host Notre Dame on October 12, and then play at Blair on October 14 and at Stuart October 17.

Lawrenceville

Football: A Devon Ramsey touchdown run was not enough as Lawrenceville fell 16-7 to visiting Hun last Saturday. The Big Red trailed 14-0 at halftime and was unable to dig out of that hole as it fell to 1-3 on the season. Lawrenceville plays at the Peddie Academy on October 13.

Field Hockey: Lawrenceville remained undefeated but just barely as it overcame a 1-0 halftime deficit to edge Hun 2-1 last Saturday. Allie Dalglish and Caroline Dittrich scored the goals for the Big Red as they improved to 5-0-2. Lawrenceville is at Chestnut Hill on October 11, at Peddie on October 13, and at Holy Ghost Prep on October 16.

PDS

Football: Clint O'Brien produced a 62-yard touchdown run but it wasn't nearly enough as PDS was routed 47-6 by undefeated Manville last Saturday. The Panthers, now 1-3, play at Bound Brook on October 7.

Boys' Soccer: Antoine Hoppenot had a big day in a losing cause as PDS fell 3-2 to Pennington last Thursday. Hoppenot scored both Panther goals as PDS dropped to 3-8 on the season. The Panthers host Allentown on October 13 and Nottingham on October 14 before playing Timothy Christian on October 17.

PHS

Field Hockey: Dee Dee Mahon's goal was the main highlight as PHS fell 7-1 at Allentown last Thursday. The Little Tigers, who dropped to 2-7 with the loss, play at Lawrence High on October 12, at Stuart on October 13, and at Lawrenceville on October 16.

Boys' Soccer: Peter Miller and Ari Silver scored but it wasn't enough as PHS lost 3-2 to WW/P-S in overtime last Thursday. The Little Tigers led 1-0 at halftime but couldn't hold off the Pirates as they dropped to 7-2 on the season. PHS plays at Lawrence on October 12 and then faces Notre Dame on October 17 at Eggerts.

Girls' Soccer: Getting outshot 11-6, PHS fell 3-1 at WW/P-S last Thursday. Dani Vildostegui scored the only Little Tiger goal as the squad dropped to 4-4-1 on the season. PHS hosts Lawrence on October 12 and Notre Dame on October 17.

Girls' Tennis: The Little Tigers fell 5-0 to powerful Lawrenceville last Monday to taste defeat for the first time this season. Previously, PHS had swept WW/P-N 5-0 last Thursday in a Central Jersey Group III quarterfinal match to improve to 10-0. PHS was slated to host Wall on October 10 in the Central Jersey Group III semifinals with the winner to play in the sectional final on October 13. In addition, the Little Tigers have a regular season match at Hopewell Valley on October 17.

Stuart

Tennis: Falling only at first singles, Stuart topped Pennington 4-1 last Saturday. The Tartans, now 6-1, have a home match with Purnell on October 12 before going across the Great Road to play Princeton Day School on October 16.

FULL STRIDE: Princeton Day School defender Keely Langdon, right, chases after the ball in a game earlier this fall. Last Thursday, Langdon scored a goal to help the Panthers defeat Moorestown Friends 3-1. In upcoming action, PDS, now 6-2-1, plays at Lawrenceville on October 12, hosts Robbinsville on October 14, and then plays at Timothy Christian on October 16. (Photo by Bill Allen/NJ SportAction)

THINKING YOUNG

When it comes to eyeglass preferences of children and teens, it seems that girls are opting for the new plastic frames (especially laminates) and boys prefer metals. Kids of both genders want frames that make color statements. The choice of frame color is a total expression of one's own individuality. It often comes down, therefore, to a matter of parents choosing the frame style because they want the eyeglasses to look good on their children, while kids are left to choose the color they want in a frame. In terms of what is trendy in color, blues, greens, and reds are strong. Boys are interested in coffee browns and blues, while girls like violet, mint green, and red.

Kids have preferences about music, hair styles, jeans - and eye glasses. Children and teenagers are more likely to wear a pair of frames that they like and that fit properly. Visit MONTGOMERY EYE CARE at Montgomery Center at 1325 Rt. 206 to browse through our display of frames for the entire family. We feature frames in the latest shapes, sizes and colors. Call us at 609-279-0005 to schedule an exam for your child or yourself. Office hours are Mon 10-8; Tues, Wed, Thurs 10-7; Fri 10-6, and Sat 9-3.

P.S. There is a growing demand for geometric shapes in kids' frames, with rectangular styles being most popular.

Patriots Baseball Team Produces Mound Gem

The Princeton Patriots 13-and-under travel baseball team defeated the Manalapan Storm 10-0 last Saturday in Dave Gallagher Baseball League action.

The highlight for the Patriots was the mound work of Clay Alter and Gordon Smith, who combined to no-hit the Storm. Smith struck out six in his pitching stint. Tyler Osterman led the Patriots offense with three hits, while James Bunn, David Maselli, and Will Young each chipped in two hits.

The Patriots are now 3-0, and are tied for first place in the league.

Princeton Ties Raritan Bay In Pop Warner Football

The Princeton Tigers tied the Raritan Bay Cougars 7-7 last Saturday in the Mighty Mite division of the Pop Warner Youth Football League.

Princeton fought back from an early 7-0 deficit to tie the game on a 22-yard touchdown jaunt by Malik Thompson late in the second quarter. Neither team scored in a hotly-contested second half as the game ended deadlocked at 7-7.

OBITUARIES

Alice O. Breese

Alice Osborn Breese, 86, of Meadow Lakes, Hightstown, formerly of Princeton, died September 30 in Hightstown. She was the former Executive Director of the Princeton Historical Society.

She was the widow of the late Gerald Breese, professor of sociology and urban planning at Princeton University. She was formerly married to Newell Brown, Director of Career and Study Services at Princeton and Assistant Secretary of Labor during the Eisenhower administration.

Born and raised in New York City, Mrs.Breese attended Chapin and Brearley Schools and graduated from Vassar College in 1941. She was the daughter of Margaret Schieffelin Osborn and Frederick H. Osborn. On her mother's side she was directly descended from John Jay and Cornelius Vanderbilt. Her paternal great-grandfather, William Henry Osborn, was president of the Illinois Central Railway in the mid 19th century and employed Abraham Lincoln as an attorney in the 1850s. Her grandfather, William Church Osborn, was president of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Her father, General Frederick H. Osborn, directed the Information and Morale branch of the U.S. Armed Services during World War II. He later served on the Atomic Energy Commission and helped found the Population Council. Many members of Mrs. Breese's family attended Princeton University and, as benefactors, donated Dodge Osborn Hall and the Osborn Field House (later renamed the Third World Center).

As senior class president at Vassar, she introduced Eleanor Roosevelt as her commencement speaker. She remained active in supporting her alma mater throughout her life.

In 1941 she was married to Newell Brown, an Army lieutenant colonel in World War II and newspaper reporter. After the war, the family lived in New Hampshire, Washington, D.C., and Hartford, Conn. before moving to Princeton in 1964. While raising her five children, Mrs. Breese taught English history at the Potomac School in Washington, and later received a master's degree from Rutgers University in library science. After serving as librarian at Princeton High School, she became Executive Director of the Princeton Historical Society in 1977.

She is survived by five children, Rosalind McClellan of Boulder, Colo., Alice Spencer of Portland, Maine, Robinson O. Brown of San Francisco, Christopher Brown of Washington, D.C., and Hilary Brown of Princeton; four step-children, Adele Overmeyer of Arlington, Va., James Breese Jr. of Denver, Brinda Breese Wederich of Belle Mead, and Dana Breese of Denver; seven grandchildren; and nine step-grandchildren.

An open memorial service will be held on Friday, October 27 at 2 p.m. at the Marquand Chapel at Princeton University Chapel.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to the Princeton Historical Society, 158 Nassau Street, Princeton 08542.

Anderson, he is survived by two sons, Mark of Gaithersburg, Md. and Timothy of Centerville, Ohio; two daughters, Pamela Anderson of Solebury, Pa. and Sharon D'Atri of Kendall Park; a brother, Daniel Anderson of Colorado; ten grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be at noon tomorrow, October 12, at The Mather-Hodge Funeral Home, 40 Vandeventer Avenue.

Burial will be in the family plot in Rocky Hill Cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to the American Heart Association, 2550 Route 1, North Brunswick 08902-4301; or to a charity of the donor's choice.

Peter M. Grosz

Longtime Princeton resident Peter M. Grosz, 80, died of complications from brain cancer on Friday, September 29, at Robert Wood Johnson Hospital in New Brunswick. A renowned World War I aviation expert, he also devoted considerable time and interest to maintaining the legacy of his father, the Expressionist artist George Grosz, best known for his savagely satirical caricatures of German society under the Weimar Republic.

Born in Germany, he spent his early childhood there. When his father left in 1932 to come to this country to accept a teaching position at the Art Students League of New York, he and his younger brother Martin remained for a year in Berlin, where he began a lifelong hobby collecting pictures of airplanes that eventually developed into the largest private collection of original photographs, technical data, books and magazines devoted to the development of German aircraft before and during World War I.

Arriving in this country in 1933, he attended schools on Long island and then Phillips Andover Academy before being drafted into the Navy in 1944. Discharged in 1946, he enrolled at Harvard, where he majored in physics, hoping to become an aircraft engineer. After graduating in 1950, he worked in a steel mill in Pittsburgh for a year until he found a job with a research and development firm in Cleveland. The firm moved its sales and administration office to Princeton in 1952, and Mr. Grosz and his bride Lilian came with it.

Later he worked for Applied Science Corporation in Princeton and still later joined International Research Consultants, which allowed him to travel and attend to his hobby and also to the estate of his father, who died in 1959 shortly after returning to Berlin to teach.

Widely known among aviation historians and constantly consulted for his knowledge of aircraft design and technology, he was the author of several books, including The German Giants: The German R-Planes, 1914-1918, which documents the development and combat service of the multiple-engine longrange bombers that bombed London 10 times during World War I.

In 1983 he was named the first Verville Fellow at the National Air and Space Museum in Washington, DC, and was given a grant to spend 1983-84 working on a book about Austro-Hungarian aircraft used in World War I. In 2005 he was awarded the Commander's Cross of the Order of Merit of the Federal Republic of Germany by the president of the Federal Republic in recognition of his lifelong avocation as aviation historian with emphasis on Germany in World War I.

When the estate of George Grosz was transferred from Germany to New York in 1962, he and his brother organized the Grosz archives, which included every book and article about their father, catalogues from every art show, and his massive correspondence, which was given to the Houghton Library at Harvard. The Grosz archive is at the Academy of Art in Berlin.

A skilled craftsman and stone mason, he enjoyed sailing his Laser in the Sunday afternoon races on Lake Carnegie sponsored by the Carnegie Sailing Club, which he served as commodore. He and his wife Lilian traveled widely and were in Berlin at least once a year. He was a devoted supporter of Princeton Friends School, serving on its development committee for many years. A loyal volunteer pricer at the annual Bryn Mawr Book Sale, he was known for turning up rare finds among the books on Germany and on military tactics. He was also devoted to his poker group.

He is survived by Lilian, his wife of 55 years, and his brother Martin, a professional jazz guitarist in Philadelphia. He was predeceased by his only son, Michael, in 1976, and his only daughter, Karin, who died in June of lung cancer.

A Memorial Meeting will be held Sunday, October 22, at 3 p.m. at Princeton Friends Meeting, Quaker Road. Memorial contributions may be made to Princeton Friends School Building Fund, 470 Quaker Road, Princeton, NJ 08540.

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

STURHAHN, DICKENSON & BERNARD

When you think of the all-time great NFL coaches, Tony Dungy doesn't come to mind. But as of the start of the 2006 season, perhaps he should. Since the advent of the wild card in 1970, Dungy is one of only two coaches to take his team to the playoffs at least seven straight seasons (Pittsburgh's Chuck Noll holds the record of eight straight from 1972 through 1979.) Dungy's 101 regular-season wins in 10 seasons is three more than Bill Belichick's in 11, and his .624 career winning percentage is better than that of Noll (his mentor), Bill Walsh, Tom Landry or Paul Brown. By the way, as a safety for Noll in 1977, the former college quarterback was forced into emergency service and both completed a pass and intercepted one in the same game against the old Houston Oilers.

Any idea which college began the tradition of homecoming, and when it was first held? In an effort to attract alumni back to the campus, the University of Illinois hosted the first-ever homecoming game on October 15, 1910. More than 1,500 alumni returned to watch their Illini defeat the University of Chicago, 3-0.

* * *

In a stunning surprise to NASCAR fans, two-time Nextel Cup champion Tony Stewart failed to qualify for the 2006 race for the chase. As a result, Stewart was forced to console himself by playing with his amazing collection of pets, which include an iguana, a tiger (which lives in a zoo near Stewart's Charlotte home), and a three-year old diaper wearing monkey named Mojo. During a race in November of 2005, Mojo was so excited to see his master's face on the screen that he leaped at it, sending the 42-inch plasma TV crashing to the floor.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU
By Tod Peyton

CALCULATING THE POINTS

When buying a home, you may be required to pay "origination fees" or "points" to secure the loan. The amount of each point is calculated based on the total mortgage loan amount. One "point" is worth one percent of the loan.

On a home mortgage loan of $200,000 one point thus equals $2,000. If the lender asks you to pay two points for this loan, you will have to come up with $4,000 by the settlement date. Buyers who intend to re-sell the home in a few years may negotiate with the lender to trade points for interest rate, since they will pay less cash up front for fewer points. The lender will charge approximately ⅛ of a 30-year interest rate more for each point they subtract from the deal.

You can calculate your break-even point by comparing the monthly payments for the higher and lower interest rates, then subtracting the difference in your monthly mortgage payment. Say you will pay $110 less for the lower rate with points. Divide that number into the amount you have to pay for the points — $4,000 on your $200,000 loan, and you get 36.4. In a little over 36 months or 3 years you will break even, and at that point you'll start paying $110 less each month for your mortgage.

For dependable individual advice on buying or selling real estate, call Tod Peyton, Realtor or any Peyton Associate at 921-1550. Please feel free to stop by my office at 343 Nassau Street in Princeton.
